Engineer's Report

The following reports from the engineer in reference to proposed sewers was presented by Coun. Waller at the Monday night's meeting of the council :

Kingston, July 4th, 1910.

The Chairman and Members of the Streets Committee,
Napanee, Ont.

Gentlemen,—I beg herewith to report on the probable cost of a Local Improvement Sewer in Main street from Bridge street to West street, to handle the sewage and completely drain all the cellars on Main street, as follows :

The total estimated cost of a 9 in. tile sewer 2672 ft. long is $6361.42

The rate per lineal foot of Street frontage, $1.19. The portion of the cost to be borne by the Municipality i.e. street intersections, $863.90, the portion to be borne by Local Assessment, $5497.52 ; total $6361.42.

The total estimated cost of the intercepting sewer as per first report, $10836.84.

The sum of $4,475.42 would therefore have to be paid out of the general funds.

In the event of the intercepting sewer being built, partly under both systems the figures would be as follows :

Local Improvement portion by Local Assessment, $5497.52 ; Local Improvement portion by Municipality, $863.90 ;
General Tax over Local Improvement portion, $4475.42 ; total $10836.81.

Respectfully submitted,
GEO. WRIGHT.

Kingston, Ont., July 8th, 1910.

The Chairman and Members of the Streets Committee,
Napanee, Ont.

Gentlemen,—I beg herewith to report on the following sewers, viz :

1 John Street Sewer from Thomas
street to the G. T. Ry.

2 Dundas Street Sewer from Donald street to the watercourse between West and Robinsons street as follows :

1 John street sewer from Thomas street to the G. T. Ry.

I recommend that a 12 in. tile be laid from the North side of Thomas street to the centre line of Graham street and a 9 in. tile from the centre line of Graham street to the G. T. Ry. line.

The total length of the sewer is 1160 ft.

The location of the sewer and the depths to grade or the invert of the sewer are outlined on the working plan and profile furnished.

The estimated total cost of the sewer in accordance with the profile including all excavation, back filling and disposing of surplus material, tile, junctions, and laying of same, engineering and inspection is $1125.66.

The rate per lineal foot of street frontage 48½c. The portion to be paid by the Municipality, i.e. street intersections $142.50, the portion to be paid by local assessment $983.07 ; total $1125.66.

This sewer will completely drain every cellar from Thomas street to the G. T. Ry. and allow for a 6 ft clear cellar below the floor joists in houses where no cellars exist at present.

2 Dundas street sewer from Donald street to the watercourse between West and Robinson streets.

I recommend a 12 in. tile throughout the entire length of 907 ft. + in. from the end of the present elevation 1 and

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
July 18th, 1910.

Council met in regular session on Monday, Mayor T. W. Simpson in the chair.

Present—Reeve Alexander and Councillors Meng, Osborne and Kimmerly.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

The matter was referred to the Poor and Sanitary Committee to take what ever they deem necessary.

The town treasurer, Mr. E. S. Lapum in a communication informed the council that as it was not part of his duty he refused to issue the dog tags and collect the fees unless allowed a ten per cent, commission.

On motion of Councillors Osborne and Kimmerly the treasurer will be allowed ten per cent on all tags issued.

Councillors Waller and Steacy entered.

Mayor Simpson informed the council that he had neglected at the previous session to lay before the council a communication he had received from the plaintiffs in the case Cartwright vs Town of Napanee. The proposition was for a settlement of the case. He had shown the communication to the different members of the and they had all consented to give the town solicitor power to proceed and endeavor to arrive at a mutual agreement for the settlement of the case.

A communication was then read from the town solicitor whereby the plaintiffs agreed to pay the sum of $925.49 in full of all taxes for 1908, both sides to pay their own costs.

A motion was passed ratifying the action of the solicitor, and agreeing to the settlement, and the case will therefore be withdrawn from the courts.

The Streets Committee laid before the council the report of the engineer in reference to the several sewers, the building of which is under consideration by the council.

On motion they were ordered received and filed with the clerk for future reference.

Coun. Steacy called the attention of the council to the fact that nothing had been done toward the repairing of Bridge street, between Centre and West streets.

Coun. Waller, chairman of the Streets Committee replied that owing to the pressure of other work, of necessity, this particular job had been neglected, but would be attended to shortly.

The Fire Water and Light Committee reported in reference to the petition for fire alarm connections in Clarksville. The reports is as follows : 1st—Would recommend that a telephone be placed in the home of Mr. John Fish to be used for fire alarm purposes.
2nd—That the Committee be instructed to have built a suitable place to set the fire engine at the foot of the street known as Lucas lane. Report adopted.

The Local Improvement By-Law was taken up and given its final reading and passed.

A communication was read from C.
A. Walters, secretary of the Napanee Light, Heat and Power Co., asking that an order be drawn on the treasurer for $400 to be expended on capital account, said expenditure to be for meters, arc lamps, line supplies, and painting poles.

The clerk was instructed to write the Telegraph and Telephone Companies asking them for a decided answer as to when they intended painting the poles used on the streets.

The following accounts were ordered paid :

JOY & SON.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Supplying Coal for the Dominion Buildings," will be received until 4 p. m., on Tuesday, August 26, 1910, for the supply of coal for the Public Buildings throughout the Dominion.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application at this office. Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, made payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering declines to enter into a contract when called upon to do so or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender is not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,

R. C. DESROCHERS,

Asst. Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, July 6, 1910.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.

every cellar from Thomas street to the G. T. Ry. and allow for a 6 ft clear cellar below the floor joists in houses where no cellars exist at present.

2 Dundas street sewer from Donald street to the watercourse between West and Robinson streets.

I recommend a 12 in. tile throughout the entire length of 907 ft. 4 in. from the end of the present elevation I find it absolutely impossible to provide drainage for the cellar of the Carscallen frame house on the corner of Robinson street.

The drainage for the cellar of the Rankin frame house adjacent to the watercourse could be provided by entering the present 15 in. lower down on the tile to get sufficient fall and going under the water main (the other alternative would be to lower the inlet to the 15 in. tile.)

I therefore submit two propositions for the Dundas street sewer.

1 To thoroughly drain every cellar from Donald to the watercourse with the exception of the Carscallen cellar, utilizing the present 15 in. tile at its present elevation and intercepting the sewage down Donald, Richard and Robinson streets as well as the water course and providing an overflow for the spring freshet.

The total estimated cost of this sewer in accordance with the profile including all excavation of rock and clay, back filling and removal of surplus material, tile, junctions and laying of same, engineering and inspection is $1053.42.

The rate per lineal foot of street frontage, 58c. The portion to be paid by the municipality, i. e. street intersections $78.88, the portion to be paid by local assessment $974.55; total $1053.43.

The location of the sewer, the depths to grades the invert of the sewer will be outlined on a working plan and profile furnished.

2 To lower the present 15 in. tile sewer from the watercourse to West street sufficiently to provide for the complete drainage of the Carscallen cellar and provide better drainage for the Rankin cottage adjacent to the watercourse.

The total estimated cost of this sewer including all excavation of clay and rock, back filling and disposing of surplus material, junctions and laying of same, engineering and inspection together with relaying the 15 in. tile already existing is $1621.58.

The rate per lineal ft of street frontage 89c. The portion to be paid by the municipality, i. e. street intersections $121.58, the portion to be paid by local assessment $1500.00; total $1621.58.

I further recommend that the 15 in. tile be maintained at its present elevation and that drainage for the Carscallen cellar be provided down Robinson street at some future time, rather than at the extra cost of relaying the 15 in. tile and lowering the grade of the whole sewer to serve one house.

I will be pleased to meet your Committee at any time to consider the report.

Respectfully submitted,
GEO. WRIGHT.

Did "Jack" Casey and Michael Hennessy, living on Wolfe Island, meet a watery grave while going over to Wolfe Island from Kingston in a skiff on Saturday night? The men are missing from their homes and the fact that a deserted skiff was picked up off Simcoe Island, on Sunday, has led to the belief that the men were drowned. Messrs. George and James Casey, brothers of one of the missing men, are putting forth every effort to locate the men. but up to late Tuesday no trace whatever had been found of them. George Casey stated that his brother came to the city on Saturday and that he had been with him during part of the day. George went to see the ball game in the afternoon and left his brother in the city. He says that it was the intention of his brother to go home on the steamer Wolfe Islander but that at the request of Mr. Hennessy he stayed in the city and that about nine o'clock he and Hennessy went to Bowman's livery and hired a skiff to return home. This was the last seen of the two men. Casey is thirty-one years old and Hennessy about forty-five and both are unmarried. Michael Hennessy is a son of William Hennessy, a farmer on the island. Both the men missing are well-known and have been working on the island all their life. The boat was picked up, at Simcoe Island, by John Whitmarsh—Whig.

CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE.

The next Census of Agriculture will be taken under date of 1st June 1911. The area, product and value of fields crops harvested in 1910 will be enumerated for fall wheat, spring wheat, barley, oats, rye, corn for husking, buckwheat, beans, peas, flax, mixed grains, hay and clover, alfalfa or lucerne, corn for forage, other forage crops, turnips, mangolds, sugar beets, other field roots, tobacco and hop; and grass seed, red clover seed and alsike clover seed will be enumerated for product and value.

Grain and other field crops for the harvest of 1911 will be taken by areas only, as none of these crops will be ripe at the taking of the census. The products of these crops will be gathered later in the year from the reports of correspondents.

Animals and animal products, also under the head of agriculture, will include the number of horses three years old and over, horses under three years, milch cows, other horned or meat cattle, sheep, swine, turkeys, geese, ducks, hens and chickens and hives of bees held or owned by each person at the date of the census on 1st June of 1911.

The number of horses, milch cows, other horned or meat cattle, sheep, swine and poultry sold in 1910, will be recorded, as well as the wool, milk, home-made butter, home-made cheese, eggs and honey products of the year, and the quantities of milk and cream sent to factory or sold.

Pure-bred animals registered, or eligible for registration, which are owned at the time of taking the census will be enumerated for horses, cattle, sheep and swine, but their number will also be counted with all other animals.

EXAMINATIONS TOO HARD.

Toronto, July 19.—Although complete returns have not been received it is stated on good authority that of the 20,000 or more Ontario children who wrote on the entrance examinations a few weeks ago less than half were successful. A few towns and cities made a creditable showing but the majority of schools fell far below the average of former years. Toronto passed 55 per cent of its candidates: Hamilton, 52; Kingston, 58; London, 62; Galt, 75; Preston, 100, and Brantford 48 per cent, while in some centres not a pupil succeeded in making the grade. In Bobcaygeon 23 candidates wrote and all failed.

A well-known member of the Ontario Educational Association was responsible for the statement to-day that this large percentage of failures was undoubtedly caused by the difficulty and general trickiness of the papers. "That arithmetic paper was not only mean and catchy," said another principal, "but I firmly believe that it was set with the express intention of plucking candidates rather than testing their knowledge. The high school teachers want all trained pupils, and it is to their interest to make the examinations as rigid as possible, and we of the public schools have to bear the brunt of their unjust and misdirected control."

Saturdays and Wednesdays Too.

Every Wednesday as well as Saturday during July and August, owing to it being a half holiday, we will sell those 50c chocolates in the boxes at 29c at Wallace's Drug store.

ANAEMIA'S VICTIMS

Can Find New Health in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Anaemia is simply a lack of blood. It therefore follows that the correct treatment for anaemia is one that increases the blood supply. That is really the only treatment that can possibly be successful. The symptoms of anaemia are easily recognized. Paleness, listlessness, the failure of food to nourish, headaches and often in women and girls backaches, faintness and palpitiation of the heart. To restore the blood supply to its normal quantity and quality Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be recommended with confidence. First because they are known to have cured thousands of anaemic people—the highest possible recommendation. Secondly they actually contain the ingredients that combine with the food and oxygen to make rich, red blood, without which no man, woman or growing boy or girl can be healthy.

Mrs. E. M. Bell, Red Deer, Alta., says:—"When I came to Alberta some years ago, a young girl, I had been suffering for a couple of years from anaemic blood. Doctors had done everything for me that could be done, but to no purpose. The doctors said I could not live, but that a change of climate might prolong my life, so my father brought me to Alberta. For a short time I did seem to improve, but soon became as bad, if not worse, than before I left Ontario. I could not walk upstairs, walk on the street, or stand in a room for more than a few minutes without fainting. Life was a burden and I did not care whether I lived or not, and had given up hope of getting better. It was at this time Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were brought to my attention, and a supply was got for me. After I had used the second box I thought I felt some better, and I continued taking the Pills until I had used nine or ten boxes, when I felt like a new person. I could walk, ride a bicycle and skate without the dreadful pains in my limbs I had before experienced, and in every way I was enjoying better health than ever before in my life. Now, whenever I feel the need of a tonic I turn at once to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I am constantly recommending them to my friends."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SHE COULD IMPROVE IT.

"Don't you like that quotation from Shakespeare: 'The friends thou hast and their adoption tried, grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel?'" he asked, soulfully.

"I think hoops of gold would be better," said the girl, shyly.

THE DIFFICULTY.

"It takes nine tailors to make a man," said the quotation fiend. "Yes," replied Reginald; "but how do you get so many to trust you?"

THE MYSTERY CLEARED UP;

OR, THE HERITAGE OF MADAME YALTA.

CHAPTER VIII.—(Cont'd)

"Perhaps. But I doubt whether my uncle will let us see her."

"I have foreseen that, and made arrangements for an interview with your cousin. I have written her that I was in possession of the entire proof of M. de Carnoel's innocence, and begged her to come immediately by the little door on the Avenue de Friedland. After a brief interview, I will return with her myself to her father, and he must receive us."

Maxime would have had more than one objection to urge, but it was now too late. He knew Alice; he knew that she would catch at this last hope, would find means of escape and hasten to the stranger who promised to restore to her the betrothed of her heart. He was roused from these reflections by the sound of a light step approaching through the shrubbery. Madame Yalta, absorbed in her reflections, seemed to hear nothing. Soon a white hand put aside the leaves, a head appeared between two camellia bushes, and Maxime rose, uttering a cry of surprise. He had recognized a face which shone an instant like a ray of sunlight, to be eclipsed almost immediately.

"She!" he exclaimed.

"What do you mean?" asked the countess, raising her head.

"The woman of the Rink—the woman who delivered Carnoel!"

Madame Yalta started. Evidently she was not expecting this visit, and found it inopportune. But she soon recovered herself, and called:

"Justine!"

The branches were put aside again, and the brunette with the golden complexion reappeared. She was beautiful as ever but had changed her toilette. The skater of the Rink, the elegant lady of the opera was modestly clad as became a lady-in-waiting. The butterfly had returned to a chrysalis.

This enigmatical creature came forward deliberately and appeared not at all surprised at seeing Maxime, who, on his part, looked at her in stupefaction.

"What is the matter?" inquired Madame Yalta.

"The person whom Madame the Countess was expecting has just arrived."

"Where have you taken her?"

"Into Madame the Countess' boudoir."

"Villagos has not yet arrived?"

"Not yet; but a box has been brought from him. Madame the Countess will find it on the lacquer table in her sleeping chamber."

"Very well. Leave us."

Justine bowed and went out quickly.

"This girl has just informed me that Mlle. Dorgeres is here," said the countess. "Do you wish to see

"I have been allied to them. I deserve my fate."

Maxime was about to cry out, but the duenna whom he had seen before, entered suddenly, went straight to her mistress, and spoke to her in a language he did not understand. The conversation was very short, and the duenna went out on a motion from the countess. Turning toward Maxime, she said shortly:

"Do not ask for explanations. The conversation you are about to hear will tell you all. Go into the boudoir where Mlle. Dorgeres is awaiting me, and beg her to listen with you. In a few moments she will have the proof that M. de Carnoel is innocent."

"Who is it you are about to receive?"

"You will see—not a word more. Go in; it is better we should not be surprised together."

"Swear to me that you are exposing yourself to no danger."

"None at this moment. You need not close the door, and by hiding behind the tapestry, may hear all that is said."

"And if you should have need of assistance, I would be there," murmured Maxime.

He felt that he loved, in spite of all, this strange woman who now rose against the Nihilists after having co-operated with their dark dealings. It was time for him to disappear. The tapestry had no sooner closed on him than M. Villagos entered.

The doctor of medicine and conspiracies was grave as a justice, and his eyes shone with a deadly light.

The countess was calm, and she advanced deliberately toward him.

"What do you want with me?" she asked.

"You have announced the sentence of death that has been passed upon me."

"I wish to question you."

"To what purpose, since I am already condemned?"

"You have accomplices. I wish to know them. Traitors must be punished."

"When I know of what I am accused, I will see whether it suits me to reply to you."

"You are accused of having compromised the success of our plans."

"This vague reply will not answer. Be precise."

"So be it. In the name of the Central Committee, I have forbidden you to interest yourself in a Frenchman suspected of a theft on the banker Dorgeres. You paid no heed to this order. Not only have you charged another Frenchman with the recovery of M. de Carnoel, but have enlisted persons engaged in your service in this work,—subalterns whom we had initiated into all our secrets and who have long worked for us. Countess Wielenska. She has sacrificed everything for her country—rank, name and fortune, and during the forty years in which she has been consigned to the humble position to which our misfortunes have brought her, she has not ceased to work day and night for the deliverance of her country. Do you think this noble woman would consent to serve longer the cowardly partisans who murder?"

"She has permitted her grandson to aid them to steal," said the doctor, with a sarcastic smile.

"The permission was granted with the sole purpose of destroying papers which compromised hundreds of her compatriots. But it was I whom he obeyed; I who dedicated myself to the accomplishment of this act, which I regarded as a sacred duty, and I do not need to remind you what it cost me."

"Yes, I know that you have been heroic," said Villagos, slowly, "and I ask myself what mad inspiration led you to desert our party after having so bravely and skilfully served it. Not a trace remained of an accident that might have ruined us, when you suddenly undertake to stir up this affair, go to war with your friends, and, seeking to destroy your own work, launch all your auxiliaries into an insane enterprise, which has succeeded only too well. Could you explain to me the cause of this sudden change?"

"The cause? There was no other than the desire to save the innocent; it was that I swore to repair the wrong unintentionally done to M. de Carnoel and to his betrothed."

"Very well. You confess that you have compromised us by your Attacks of cholera and dysentery come quickly, there seldom being any warning of the visit. Remedial action must be taken just as quickly if the patient is to be spared great suffering and permanent injury to the lining membranes of the bowels. The readiest preparation for the purpose is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It can be got at small cost at any drug store or general dealer's, and it will afford relief before a doctor can be called.

UNBROKEN.

Bridget—"I never break my word, mum."
Mrs. Hiram Offen—"That is very remarkable; it's about the only thing you haven't broken since you have been here."

A man can resent of almost anything if it hits his pocketbook hard enough.

Justice bowed and went out quickly.
"This girl has just informed me that Mlle. Dorgeres is here," said the countess. "Do you wish to see her?"
"But—I do not know whether I caught," stammered the cousin.
"Yes. Better that you should be present at our interview. Come."
"But—"
"What?"
"The brunette—the accomplice of the thieves—she whom you call Justine—"

"Is my femme de chambre," replied the countess, quietly. "Come, the moments are precious."
And cutting short any further explanations, she rose to leave the conservatory. Maxime followed without a word. He was in a state of extreme agitation.

"Her femme de chambre," he thought.
The creature who pilfered me of the bracelet is in her service—like the gardener—like the fencing-master—and she has given me to understand that all this pretty set of people took part in the theft of the safe. Am I to suppose that the orders came from her?

They crossed, without exchanging a word, a corner of the park, meeting with no one, and arrived before a door of the cottage that was unfamiliar to Maxime. The Countess conducted him through corridors and stairways to the large apartments on the first floor. Neither Justine nor the duenna who had twice introduced Maxime, were there to receive them.

Preceded by Madame Yalta, he reached the room in which he had seen her the day before in the great bedstead with pillars and canopies.

"Mlle. Dorgeres is there," she said, pointing to the doorway of Gobelin tapestry, which concealed the entrance to the boudoir. "Do you not think you would do well to speak to her first, and prepare her for what I have to say?"

"No," replied Maxime. "She thinks I have taken sides against Robert de Carnoel, and would not listen to me. She now believes only in you, and is distrustful of me."

He was still speaking when his eyes fell upon an object upon a Chinese lacquer table. It was a box of peculiar shape, widened at the top and closed with a lid.

"There, no doubt, is what Dr. Villagos has sent you," he said.

Madame Yalta opened the strange cover which was of fir wood, quite rough, and drew from it a bouquet of immortelles.

"A singular gallantry," said Maxime.

The countess did not reply. She let fall the mournful flowers, and he saw that she turned pale.

"I expected it," she said.

"What does M. Villagos mean by this ridiculous present?"

"It signifies my sentence of death."

"Your sentence of death!" exclaimed Maxime.

"Yes; I am condemned."

"Condemned by this miserable Villagos?"

"By the Nihilists, of whom he is the chief. They accuse me of having betrayed them."

"You?"

but have enlisted persons engaged in your service in this work,—subalterns whom we had initiated into all our secrets and who have long worked for us. Your fencing-master, Kardiki, and your femme de chambre, Justine, have taken part in an intrigue, the object of which was to deliver a stranger who, to prove his own innocence, would not fail to designate the guilty party."

"He does not know them."
"But he would know them if I let you live. You have sworn to restore him what he has lost, and you cannot reinstate him without denouncing us."

"Without denouncing myself you mean. You have rightly guessed. I propose to recount to M. Dorgeres, to his daughter, the true history of the theft. I shall tell them by whom it was committed and with what object. He will believe me, for I shall bring him an unanswerable proof. I think fit to add that I shall not mention the names of any of those who urged me to it."

"I have no longer faith in your discretion; but I may ask why it is that you turn against us after having so well served us."

"Because I choose to have no dealings with the murderers who have just blown up the Winter Palace," replied the countess, looking fixedly at Villagos.

"Your scruples come rather late. When you took the vow to contend with us against tyranny, you were not ignorant that fire and sword would be employed to destroy it."

"I pictured to myself an insurrection against the Russian government," replied the countess, proudly. "I knew there had been murderers among you, but I believed these to be isolated acts to which those who committed them had been driven by despair. The news from St. Petersburg has opened my eyes. You may kill me; you will not force me to remain one of you. I am the daughter of a man who died in Siberia, whither he had been exiled for taking up arms for the independence of Poland. It was to free my country that I consented to become your ally, and the brave men and women whom I have led into a complicity with you have had no other aim. Kardiki has served his country, and he believed he was serving her still in executing my orders. Justine is Parisian, but her father and her husband are Polish. Georges, the brave boy who has risked his liberty and his life for me, is the grandson of a Frenchman who died fighting in the ranks of the Polish army, and she who shared his dangers and who married him during the great insurrection of 1831 was born the than the desire to save the innocent; it was that I swore to repair the wrong unintentionally done to M. de Carnoel and to his betrothed."

"Very well. You confess that you have compromised us by your sentimental follies. It is an unpardonable crime. I may, however, take on me to pardon you on two conditions."

"Spare yourself the trouble of naming them. I shall not submit to them."

"The first," resumed the impetuous doctor, "is that you leave France never to return. The second—your protegee, Carnoel is here; I am certain. It was to your house that Justine and Kardiki brought him last night. If you wish the Committee to overlook your faults,—if you desire to live, it is necessary to deliver up this man—to deliver him to me this day—instantly."

"To deliver M. de Carnoel to you!" said the countess, with a contemptuous smile. "To be murdered, no doubt. And it is to me you dare to propose a cowardice."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS CURE SUMMER COMPLAINTS

Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home where there are infants and young children, and at first sign of illness during the hot summer months they should be given to the little one. At no time of the year is baby in such danger as in summer. Summer complaints come on so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand the little one may be beyond help in a few hours. The Tablets never fail to relieve the sick child, and if occasionally given to the well child they will keep him well. Mrs. P. Laroche, Les Fonds, Que., says:—"Last summer my baby suffered severely from stomach and bowel troubles but the prompt use of Baby's Own Tablets saved his life." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RURAL ENGLAND.

"An Ancient Land and a Land of Lovely Homes."

"The characteristic beauty of England, the beauty in which she has no rival is of a land of which mention is fittingly made after a description of her rural society and life. It is the beauty of a land which combines the highest cultivation with sylvan greenness, of an ancient land and a land of lovely homes. The eastern countries are flat and tame. But elsewhere the country is rolling, and from every rising ground the eye ranges over a landscape of extraordinary finish. The finish, which is the product of immense wealth, laid out on a small area, is perhaps more striking than anything else to the stranger who comes from a raw land of promise. Trees being left in the hedgerows as well as in the parks, and pleasure grounds and in the copses, which serve as covers for game the general appearance is that of woodland, though every rod of the land is under the highest tillage.

showing themselves everywhere, fill the landscape with human interest. There is many a more picturesque, there is no lovelier land than old England, and a great body of essentially English poetry—from Cowper to Tennyson—attests at once the unique character and the potency of the charm. The sweetest season is spring when the landscape is most intensely green, when the May moon is in bloom in all the hedges and the air is full of its fragrance, when the meadows are full of cowslips, the banks of primroses and violets, the woods of the wild hyacinth. Then you feel the joyous spirit that breathes through certain idyllic passages of Shakespeare.—Goldwin Smith.

WHY THE QUACK PROSPERS

A quack and a doctor of great learning once fell into conversation. The regular doctor said to the other, "How is it that you, without education, skill, or the least knowledge of medicine, are able to live in the style you do? You have your town house, your carriage, your motor-car and your country-house, while I can little more than pick up a bare subsistence."

The quack, so the story goes, laughed good-naturedly.

"Look here," said he. "How many people do you think have passed us on this street here since you asked that question?"

"Well," said the other, "about one hundred."

"And out of that hundred how many do you think possesses good common sense?"

"Possibly one," was the reply.

"Well," said the quack, "that one comes to you, and I take care of the ninety-nine."

TREES THAT TRAVEL.

Continents Exchange Trees of Many Kinds.

In connection with a recent demand of German nurserymen for seeds of the Montana larch, to be planted in Germany, the curious fact is brought out that white pine seedlings are to be imported from Germany to be planted in the province of Ontario. Now the white pine is indigenous to America, and was transplanted to Europe many years ago, to reinforce the forests there. It has flourished so well in the Old World that it now appears that the German nurserymen are able to deliver white pine seedlings on this side of the ocean more cheaply than American nurserymen will furnish them. The interchange of trees among the various continents is a most interesting development of modern civilization. Besides the white pine, Europe has taken from us the Douglas fir and the black walnut, and we have taken the eucalyptus from Australia and the Norway spruce and Scotch and Austrian pine from Europe.

The Statement of Earnings and Balance Sheet have been confirmed by Messrs. Marwick, Mitchell & Co., London, England.

PURPOSE OF PRESENT ISSUE

The present issue of Bonds is to provide for enlargements to the Moose Jaw Mill, the establishment of an Oatmeal Mill at that point, and for the purpose of additional elevators.

SECURITY FOR BOND ISSUE

The Bond Issue is a First Mortgage on all the property of the Company now owned, or hereafter acquired. The Company now owns five mills: one in Saskatchewan, three in Minnesota, and one in Iowa, with a combined capacity of 6,000 barrels per day. The property of the Company has been appraised by the American Appraisal Company, and the property is carried in the Balance Sheet at the depreciated value.

ADDITIONAL SECURITY

In addition to being secured by a Mortgage on the Company's assets, the Bondholders also have the security of a double liability attached to the Capital Stock.

FUTURE ISSUES

It is the intention of the Company to largely increase its milling capacity in Canada by the establishment of additional mills at points to be selected, and bonds may be issued for the purchase of, or the construction of, these mills, but only to the extent of 75% of the actual cost, and then only if the net earnings of the Company for the previous year are equal to twice the total charges for interest on Bonds issued or to be issued. The Mortgage is closed at $1,500,000.

SINKING FUND

Under the Trust Deed a Sinking Fund is provided to be deposited with the National Trust Company, Limited which will redeem before maturity 75% of the outstanding Bonds at 105 and accrued interest, or at current market price.

GRAND TRUNK AND TRAINMEN

Strike Was Begun All Over the System on Monday Night.

Montreal, July 18.—Negotiations were abruptly broken off this afternoon between the conductors and trainmen of the Grand Trunk and the company, and sharp at 9.30 to-night a strike of the men started to enforce their demands for the standard rate of wages for the territory east of Chicago. It is estimated by the men that this strike will involve 3,500 conductors and trainmen on the Grand Trunk between Portland and Chicago and 350 men on the Central Vermont, and it is hoped by them that they will be able to tie up the passenger and freight service on both lines. This declaration of war was expected on both sides, and they have both been quietly preparing for it. The Grand Trunk has for some time been arranging to get additional men to furnish crews, and also to take all men available from their other services and put them on the trains as far as necessary. A further factor to the dispute, which will have a very wide effect, is the decision of the Grand Trunk Company to close all its shops at Montreal, Toronto, London, Startford, Port Huron, Battle Creek, Portland, Chicago, and all over the system, pending a settlement of the dispute. This will mean that many thousands of men in these cities will be thrown out of employment through no fault of their own, perhaps for an indefinite period. It is stated that this is not through any desire on the part of the Grand Trunk to hurt its employees, but because if they have so tremendous an industrial dispute to fight it will take all the available funds, and they will have to concentrate their energies on this end of the matter, leaving the work of the shops as a secondary consideration.

COUNT UP CANUCK HEADS

HOW THE CENSUS OF THE DOMINION WILL BE TAKEN.

Inquisitive Gentleman Will Call First of Next June and Ask all About You.

The next census of Canada will be taken under date of June 1st, 1911, and will embrace the subjects of population, mortality, agriculture, manufactures, minerals, fisheries and dairy products.

Population will be recorded under the heads of residence and personal description; citizenship, nationality and religion; profession, occupation and trade, or means of living; wage earnings and insurance; education and language spoken, and infirmities.

Every person living on the 1st of June will be entered on the schedule of population by name, as member of a family, institution or household, together with place of habitation, sex, relationship to head of the family or household, and whether single, married, widowed, divorced or legally separated. The month of birth, year of birth and age at last birthday will also be recorded.

WHERE YOU COME FROM.

Entries will be made for each person to show the country or place of birth, year of immigration to Canada if born elsewhere, year of naturalization if formerly an alien, and also racial or tribal origin, nationality and religion. Every person of alien birth who has become a naturalized citizen is a Canadian by nationality; and every British subject with residence in Canada, as well as every native of Canada who has acquired citizenship by birth or naturalization, is also a Canadian by nationality. But there mill, at foundry shop, in drug store, etc.

Wage-earners are entered to show the number of weeks employed in 1910 at chief occupation or trade; at other than chief occupation, if any; the hours of working time per week at chief occupation, or at other occupation, if any; the total earnings in 1910 at chief occupation; the total earnings at other than chief occupation; and the rate per hour when employed by the hour.

Entries are required to be made for each person showing the amount of insurance held at date of the census upon life, as well as against accident or sickness, together with the cost of such insurance in the census year.

WHAT YOU KNOW.

Under the heading of education and language records will be taken for every person of five years of age and over showing the number of months at school in 1910, and if the person can read and write, and the language commonly spoken by each person. The cost of education in 1910 for persons over 16 years of age at college, convent or university is also called for.

WHAT AILS YOU.

The last question on the schedule of population relates to infirmities. It calls for a record of each person having an infirmity. If blind, deaf and dumb, crazy or lunatic, idiotic or silly, a record thereof will be made in the proper column, and the age at which the infirmity appeared is required to be specified.

Fashion Hints.

SEEN IN PARIS SHOPS.

Blue reigns supreme. Pongee petticoats are new. Some of the plaitings come with a border in color. Tighter than ever are the skirts at the bottom. Tulle makes a simple yet attractive coiffure ornament. The gunmetal ties for street wear still hold their own. Among the new ribbons is one covered with peacock eyes. Suits of the Rajah are made on severe lines. Marguerites have a strong vogue in present Paris millinery decoration.

Tucked long gloves are again in and they are likely to stay for the summer. The newest thing in the way of a novelty pillow is the Chantecler design. The fad for belts and girdles of red patent leather shows no sign of abatement. Chantecler gloves have come forward to match the Chantecler handkerchief.

White canvas pumps as well as oxfords are much used for street wear. Crocheted neck ruches are a novel idea, and they are smart and practical.

Many of the Persian bags have small silk tassels added to the handles. Old rose colors are fairly entrenched in the fashion scheme of the moment.

Brown satin pumps for street wear are among the newest things in footwear.

Blue suede shoes are quite smart for street wear when one's costume is dark blue.

WHAT YOU DO.

Every person having an occupation or trade will be entered for it, but if employed in the census year at some other occupation for part or whole time he will be so recorded also. If the person is working on own account, the entry will be so made. An entry is also required to be made showing where the person is employed, as on farm, in woollen Office.

A despatch from Welland says: On Saturday night Mr. W. H. Willson, manager of Hennessy's drug store, was accidentally shot and killed by a revolver in the hands of George Laing, night policeman. Laing's revolver was not working well, and he borrowed, a few days ago, a revolver from Willson and cleaned his own. Saturday he returned Willson's, and was showing him how well the revolver he had cleaned worked. Supposing he had removed all the cartridges he snapped the revolver. Willson, who was sitting in a chair, received the ball in his heart. Dr. Colbeck and Dr. M. Clelland were summoned immediately, but the injured man expired in a few minutes.

THE CANNED GOODS ACT

The Regulations Regarding Inspection Are Now in Force.

A despatch from Ottawa says: An order in Council has been passed bringing into force regulations governing the inspection of preserved fruits, vegetables and milk under the meat and canned foods act. The regulations apply only to the inspection of canned foods for export from Canada, or from one Province to another. They are similar to regulations now in force governing cleanliness and sanitary conditions in factories and slaughter-houses handling meat for export trade. It is provided that all operations in connection with the preparation of packing of products in establishments coming within the scope of the act shall be carried on with the strictest regard for cleanliness and public health. All fruits, vegetables, milk or other articles used for canning purposes must be in a wholesome condition, buildings must be kept clean and well lighted, no injurious drug, dye or preservative may be used, and all employees must be free from tuberculosis or any other communicable disease. All cans must have labels giving the name of the packer, the date of packing, and a true and correct description of the contents.

FIELD CROPS IN CANADA

All in Ontario in Good Condition, But Parts of the West Suffered From Drought.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The monthly crop report of the Census and Statistics Office, issued on Thursday, shows that the condition of field crops throughout Canada at the end of June was generally satisfactory, with the exception of parts of the west where drought had done considerable damage. Fall wheat for all Canada is reported at 85.4 per cent. of standard condition.

The condition of all the field crops is good in Ontario, the highest being 94.21 for fall wheat and the lowest 84.79 for spring wheat.

Quebec crops range from 74.45 for mixed grains to 102.58 for hay and clover.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have low averages throughout, owing to a light rainfall in June.

The general condition of the crops in Manitoba is much below the average. Correspondents in nearly every district report no rains, only a few light showers, and hot, dry winds that absorb the moisture and wither the crops.

The lowest average condition is reported from around Brandon and Morden, and the highest from Marquette, where it is placed at a standard.

In Saskatchewan the crops do not appear to have suffered from climatic conditions to the same extent as in either Manitoba or Alberta, as there have been many local showers.

The reports from Lloydminster, Battleford, Indian Head and Qu'Appelle are very favorable, the condition of the wheat being placed at 100 and over.

The prevailing condition of crops in that part of Alberta south of townships number three and number thirty is below the average, in consequence of the drought and hot winds. In the Edmonton district the grains, although suffering to some extent from the same causes, are in much better condition. The best reports come from the Strathcona district, and those from Athabasca Landing and Saddle Lake districts are also particularly favorable.

Brown satin pumps for street wear are among the newest things in footwear.

Blue suede shoes are quite smart for street wear when one's costume is dark blue.

Supple poplins, fine serges, and tissues of open meshes are used for tailored suits.

For street wear there is a growing fashion for the severe frocks of striped linen.

Furze wood, maple, and bamboo seem to be the favorite woods for parasol handles this season.

The majority of bathing shoes are low, but a few high models laced with silk ribbon are also seen.

Hand painted scarfs, ribbons, and dress stuffs, as well as parasols, are decidedly smart.

Neck ruffs of tulle, the exact tone of one's costume, are seen whenever a cooler day comes.

The Persian belts are usually finished with a narrow edge of patent leather or dark yellow suede.

Crocheted pearl collar pins are one of the latest fads and much in keeping with summer toilets.

White kid gloves are stitched in colors to match the frock. Lavenders and pinks are especially favored.

Most of the parasols this season have handles from five to eight inches longer than those of a year ago.

Jet necklaces with pendants of jet continue in favor. They are seen more with collarless gowns than ever.

Pumps are fashionable in one form or another, in kid, suede, and patent leather. The stiff pump low is seen and the string bow also.

Silver is used more and more as a setting for precious and semi-precious stones, whether in rings, pendants, pins, bracelets, or buckles.

DOUKHOBORS ROUNDED UP.

Three Mounted Policemen Run Them Into a Barn.

A despatch from Kamsack, Sask., says: Inspector Jarvis of the Mounted Police, with two constables, made record time on Thursday to Verigin, the Doukhobor village, where 42 fanatics made a bonfire of their clothes and much money. They swore in four specials, and after a hard tussle, in which they had all the worst of it for a time, succeeded in driving the horde into a barn, which they parolled all night. They asked for aid from the leading men of the Doukhobor village, who refused. Additional police are being rushed to the scene.

SETTLERS FOR ALBERTA.

Mr. F. W. Brown Reports Active Movement From Ontario.

A despatch from Calgary says: Mr. F. W. Brown, Publicity Commissioner for Alberta, arriving in Calgary on Saturday, says: "I left Toronto on Tuesday with a special of ten cars, carrying three hundred Ontario settlers destined for Alberta points. Twenty-five are business men who will open stores in new towns. Others are sons of wealthy Ontario farmers, and the majority will buy land and immediately commence development. Nothing can stop the movement from Ontario to Alberta. The influx is the result of the aggressive Provincial publicity campaign."

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Montreal, July 19. — Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.90; do., seconds, $5.40; winter wheat patents, $5.25; Manitoba strong bakers', $5.20; straight rollers, $1.90 to $5; do., in bags, $2.30 to $2.45; extras, $1.80 to $1.90.

Hay—No. 1 hay, $14.50 to $15; extra No. 2, $13.50 to $14; No. 2, $12 to $12.50; clover, mixed, $11 to $11.50; clover, $10.50 to $11, car lots.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 65½¢ to 66¢; American No. 3 yellow, 64½¢ to 65¢.

Oats—No. 2 Canadian, 39½¢ to 40¢; No. 3, 38½¢ to 39¢.

Barley—No. 3, 49¢ to 50¢; No. 4, 45¢ to 46¢.

Millfeed—Ontario bran, $19.50 to $20; do., middlings, $21 to $22; Manitoba bran, $19; do., shorts, $21; pure grain mouillie, $32 to $33; mixed mouillie, $25 to $28.

Cheese—Western, 10½¢ to 11¢ and eastern, 10½¢ to 10¾¢.

Eggs—Selected stock, 21¢; straight receipts, 17¢ to 17½¢ per dozen; second grade Lower Province eggs, 12½¢ to 13¢ per dozen.

Butter—Purchases in a wholesale way were made at 22½¢; for round lots ruling quotations are 22½¢ to 23½¢, with 23 to 23½¢ to grocers.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

Montreal, July 19.—Choice steers $5.15 to $6.40; cows, $3.40 to $4.00, and bulls, $3.40 to $5.30. Sheep $4.75 to $5.60; lambs at $4.50 to $6. Hogs from $9.75 to $10; sows, $8.75 to $9. Calves, $5 to $8.

UNITED STATES MARKETS.

St. Louis, July 19.—Wheat—July, $1.00½; September, $1.00½; December, $1.02½.

Buffalo, July 19.—Wheat—Spring wheat firmer; No. 1 Northern carloads short, $1.21½; Winter, nominal. Corn—Stronger; No. 3 yellow, 66½¢; No. 4 yellow, 64½¢; No. 3 corn, 64½¢; No. 4 corn, 62½¢, all on track, through billed. Oats—Strong. Barley—Malting, 70 to 75¢.

Toronto, July 19.—Trade in stockers is quiet. Very few of good quality are coming forward, and while there was a good inquiry for stockers of from 900 to 1,000 pounds, buyers seemed rather unwilling to pay the prices that were asked. Buying of steers and bulls for distillery feeding is expected to commence in a few weeks now, when the right kind of cattle will be coming in. There is not much demand at present for milk cows, prices of which are a little off. Although there was a good supply of hogs on the market, the prices were advanced to $9.40 fed and watered, and $9 in the country. Sheep and lambs were also firmer than at the beginning of the week, the latter being sold as high as $9.50.

Less Intoxicating Liquor was Drunk Last Year.

A despatch from Washington says: According to figures furnished the United States Government by Consul-General Griffiths, of London, there was a marked falling off in the consumption of intoxicating liquors in Great Britain during 1909. In that year the amount expended for liquors was $738,000,000, a decrease of $54,000,000 from 1908.

Capt. Kenneth Beardwood, a well-known Montrealer, is missing. Two daughters of George Kilchling were drowned at Hanley, Sask., while bathing.

Five men were burned to death near Kaslo, B. C., taking refuge from forest fires in the shaft of a mine.

Dr. Harvey Crippen, the man wanted in England for murder, is said to have arrived at Montreal on the steamer Megantic.

Dorothy Hastie, aged eight years, of Ottawa, was run over and decapitated by a radial car on Hamilton Beach.

Mr. H. C. McLeod of Toronto was robbed on a Pullman sleeper between Toronto and Cleveland, Ohio.

Elias Parks, a Finlander, was married at Wetaskiwin, Alberta, and got up the next morning and hanged himself in his barn.

M. Kilpatrick was sentenced to four months in jail at New Liskeard for an unprovoked assault on License Inspector Blackwell.

Two dry-kilns in the Keenan woodenware factory at Owen Sound were burned on Thursday, and the Chief of the fire brigade was overcome by the intense heat.

Mr. Frank Bezanson of Sydney, C. B., was killed while driving an automobile near Baddeck on Saturday, his wheel striking a stone and the car being upset.

William Ward was fined $100 at St. Catharines for selling an alleged temperance beer. A witness swore that he became intoxicated from drinking the mixture.

Pulpwood concessions around Lake Nipigon are to be sold by the Ontario Government subject to condition that the wood is manufactured into paper in Ontario.

Three men were shot at Swan Lake, Man., while trying to force their way into Fred. Bowderwell's room. Bowderwell was arrested, and one of the wounded men may die.

The Department of Marine has ordered an investigation of the recent drowning in Toronto Bay, when two women lost their lives through a gasoline launch being run down by a ferry.

BAD FOR THE WHEAT.

Damage All Over the West Admitted by Grainmen.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Warm, dry weather continues in Manitoba, with occasional scattered showers. There are many reports of showers in Saskatchewan, but it is now admitted by leading grain men that great additional damage was done last week, and that the estimate of one hundred million bushels made public ten days ago is now away above the mark. With no steady rains, and reports of showers very conflicting, it is exceedingly difficult to estimate the exact progress of the crop from day to day, but it now looks as if a half crop throughout the country is the most that can possibly be looked for.

VENTRILOQUIST'S TRICK.

Caused the Stoppage of a Train Near Kenora.

A despatch from Kenora says: While train No. 94, en route east on Friday morning last, was nearing Kenora, several of the passengers and the porter in the tourist car became alarmed at continued shouts for help, coming as if from a man suspended from the roof of the car. The conductor was notified and the train stopped. The cries continued, but the unfortunate man was nowhere to be seen. A little later when the train had resumed its speed it was discovered that a ventriloquist, occupying a lower berth in the car, was responsible for the commotion caused.

WATER CARRIAGE ACT.

Shipowners Responsible for Safety of Goods.

A despatch from Montreal says: Considerable anxiety is being expressed by shipowners with regard to the provisions of the water carriage of goods act, which comes into force on September 1 next, although the shippers are jubilant, claiming that it is just what they wanted. The ship-owners say that it makes them a sort of insurers of the cargo, and will inevitably raise rates, to the detriment of the Canadian shipping trade. It was stated by Board of Trade officials on Wednesday that the result of the new act would be that water carriers, both between Canadian ports and from Canadian to foreign ports, would have to be responsible as to cargoes, so far as the ship, shipowners, crew or agents were concerned. This, it was said, almost put the ship-owners, who were contract carriers, in the same position as common carriers on land, and would make them much more responsible for any negligence in handling vessels or cargoes than they are at present.

Premier Wishes An Arrangement Could Be Made With Germany.

A despatch from London says: During the debate on naval expenditure in the House of Commons on Thursday afternoon Mr. Asquith reiterated that it was the desire of the British Government to come to a friendly agreement with Germany looking to the curtailment of armaments. "I wish," said the Prime Minister, "that an arrangement could be reached with Germany for a reduction of the vast naval expenditure. This Government has approached the German Government on the subject, but the latter can do nothing owing to the navy law on their statute books. That being so, we must make our programme accordingly."

Mr. Asquith repudiated the suggestion that the British expenditure was in any sense hostile to Germany. He declared that the relations between the two countries were most cordial, and pointed out that by April, 1913, Great Britain would have only twenty-five Dreadnoughts to Germany's twenty-one.

HEALTH

THE EYES AND LIGHT.

It is an undoubted fact that people in general pay much more attention to the care of the eyes than was formerly the case, and it is well that this is so.

A great deal more is demanded of the human eye to-day than in former times, even if one goes back only a very little way. It is not only the increasing strain of education, for in many ways the strain here is lessened, owing to better methods, bigger windows, clearer print, and growing knowledge of the limitations of the eye; but it is impossible to move without being impressed with the continuous and everlasting invitations to the eye to overwork itself unnecessarily. Every boat and train and trolley is lined with printed matter, and the eyes have to be perked away like an unwilling child from a window of toys. If one flees to the real country, one finds every barn and fence plastered with admonition and advice. So that in a sense all have become involuntary and obligatory readers, even the least literary. The only way out of it all is to travel with shut eyes.

The worst danger, however, is not in the daytime. It is, in all great cities at least, after dark that ing the eyes. The glare from the sand and waves brings about the same discomfort in susceptible eyes as that from snow, although mountain-climbers are said to suffer more severely because the light on high mountains is richer in the ultra-violet rays than the light in valleys.

These violet rays, which cause the trouble, may be offset by the wearing of amber-tinted glasses, which split up these rays before they reach the retina.

Now that lighting by electricity is becoming so general a fashion, it is advisable that people should learn how to protect their eyes from its glare; its light should always be arranged not to shine directly on the eyes, the bulb should always be made of ground glass, and several lamps of moderate power are better than one extremely powerful one.

FOR CHINA'S NEW ARMY.

Germany Will Send Officers to Undertake Reorganization.

A Berlin correspondent sends the following:—Dr. Kistler, the Court Councillor, in The Neueste Nachrichten, says that China has requested Germany to send a number of officers to reorganize the Chinese army. The proposition has been made on the basis of compulsory service in the army in China.

The body of Belle Elmore, the wife of Dr. Crippen, formerly of Toronto, was found in her home in London, England, after her husband had disappeared.

A bill making compulsory the equipment of all passenger vessels touching at British ports with a wireless telegraph system passed its first reading in the British Commons on Wednesday.

UNITED STATES.

A Sunday baseball game was stopped by the Sheriff at Elmira, N. Y.

The Pennsylvania Railroad and its trainmen have arrived at an agreement.

Lieut. Pfütner, a Hungarian aviator, made despondent by numerous mishaps, drowned himself at Marblehead, Mass.

Walter Northrup, said to have lived in Toronto for ten years, disappeared mysteriously from Syracuse a week after he had been married.

The trainmen of the Pennsylvania Railroad have voted by a very large majority in favor of a strike unless an agreement as to wages and working conditions is reached with the company.

Mrs. Cassie Ellis, formerly of Toronto, is under arrest at Pontiac, Mich., in connection with the shooting of Frank Bevier, to whom she was to have been married on July 24.

FIRES RAGING IN THE HILLS.

Farmers in Glenboro' District, Manitoba, Ask for Help.

A despatch from Glenboro, Man., says: Dry weather has killed the grass, and fires are raging in the hills north of here. Farmers living in the vicinity 'phoned into town at noon on Thursday for help, as the fire will be disastrous if allowed to go unchecked. Some fields of grain are reported to have been burned. The condition is serious, as it will mean no pasture for large herds of cattle which are being kept there. Help has been sent to the scene of the conflagration.

FROM ST. LAURENT.
A despatch from St. Laurent Man., says: Lost on the prairie since Wednesday evening, Maudie Hunter, aged six years, is being ceaselessly sought for by her parents and neighbors. The child was trying to find her way home from her grandmother's, where she was visiting, but two miles distant along the bush road, on Wednesday evening. She was directed by a boy who passed her on horseback, but must have blundered. Two boys thought they saw her, but did not know the child was lost, and thought she was picking berries. Much of the country is bush and bluffs, and if she reached it it will be almost impossible to find her. Owing to the drought the sloughs are all dried up.

NEW GOSPEL IN CHICAGO.

Equal Rights for Women Discussed on Streets.

A despatch from Chicago says: Chicago suffragettes on Thursday began to follow the methods of their London sisters and inaugurated a vigorous campaign on the streets in favor of votes for women. The first campaigners were a woman justice of the peace, a woman doctor, four Vassar girls, and two men, equipped with an automobile, a permit from the Chief of Police, yellow hand bills and a contempt for rain. They preached "the gospel of equal suffrage" for the first time on the streets of downtown Chicago. The women pleaded for equal rights with men with a fervor that held some men standing in the rain for the better part of an hour and drew occasional applause.

NOVA SCOTIA GOLD.

Big Strike Made at Montague — Samples Brought to Halifax.

A despatch from Halifax says: Mr. S. A. Hiseior is in the city from Montague with a box of the finest gold quartz specimens seen in Halifax for years. Mr. Hiseior is interested with others in the American mine property at Montague, and for two years they have had a gang of men at work prospecting. Going down into the old shaft 70 or 80 feet they branched off in a direction where the lead was supposed to lie, and this week the strike was made. Specimens brought in by Mr. Hiseior show gold sticking out all over them, and he thinks a lot of the quartz taken out will run at least twenty ounces to the ton.

ACCIDENT ON C. N. R.

Immigrant Train Derailed and Two Cars Catch Fire.

A despatch from Montreal says: An immigrant train on the river route of the Canadian Northern of Quebec was partially wrecked about 11 o'clock on Thursday morning near Cap Rouge, where the line runs close to the river edge. The baggage car and smoker jumped the track and upset, both cars catching fire. It is stated that one of the train crew in the baggage car was seriously injured, but that all the passengers escaped. The passengers were transferred to another train, later in the day, and sent on to Montreal.

and advice. So that in a sense all have become involuntary and obligatory readers, even the least literary. The only way out of it all is to travel with shut eyes.

The worst danger, however, is not in the daytime. It is, in all great cities at least, after dark that the greatest risk is incurred. When the healing, peaceful night descends, then comes the assault of light, and many are beginning to realize that it is from dusk to bed time that the eyes are put to their greatest strain.

It has always been recognized that excessive light can cause injury to the eye. Snow-blindness is a conspicuous instance of this, as is also what is called eclipse blindness, meaning symptoms which follow an attempt to watch an eclipse of the sun. The same symptoms can be produced by watching any very bright light without protect-

GERMAN SHIPYARD WORKERS

Threaten to Strike Unless Demands are Granted.

A despatch from Hamburg says: Thirty-five thousand shipyard workers united on Thursday in a demand upon their employers for an increase of ten per cent. in wages and a 53 hour week. They threaten to strike in the event of the concessions being refused. The workmen are engaged in the shipyards at Hamburg, Bremen, Vegesack, Bremerhaven, Flensburg, Kiel, Lübeck, Rostock, and Stettin.

WHOLE CAMP DESTROYED

Bush Fires Wipe Out Construction Camp on the National Transcontinental.

A despatch from Kingston says: News of a disastrous fire in a construction camp on the National Transcontinental has reached here. P. Courtney, one of O'Brien's contractors, situated at Mileage 147, or 150 miles west of Cochrane, was burned out by one of the numerous bush fires now raging. The whole camp was destroyed, the damage amounting to $25,000, partly covered by insurance.

The fire is supposed to have started from station men burning brush on the right-of-way. It covered about six miles in an hour. The men sought refuge in the Valentine River, a quarter of a mile away. In this they stood up to their necks, and to keep from burning as the fire swept by kept continually ducking under water. The river literally ran cinders after the fire passed over it. One man, Daniel Egan, suffered severe burns on the arms and face, and was hurried to the hospital at Missanibi River, 35 miles away.

Owing to the foresight of Mr. Courtney great loss of life was avoided. The powder house, containing five tons of dynamite and one hundred cases of black powder, had just been banked with clay two feet thick. Eight horses, cut loose, saved themselves by running directly west through the fire. The men saved nothing except the clothes they were wearing, and even these were burned from sparks.

Canadian Appreciation

Langham Hotel, London.

Gentlemen,—I wish to express my appreciation of the 38 h.p. Daimler which you have delivered to me. Before shipping the car to Canada I made a three weeks' trial of it, covering some 1,200 miles. The car ran perfectly, and I never had the slightest trouble of any kind, and I think it quite lives up to the many claims you make for it. The silence, smoothness of running, and power of acceleration on hills is really remarkable.

My petrol consumption was 16 miles to the gallon, including a great deal of driving in traffic. The tyres show no appreciable signs of wear, and I think it will prove light on tyres. I am really delighted with the car.—Yours sincerely,

THE RIVER NILE.

Egypt Would Be a Wilderness but For This Wonderful Stream.

The Nile is probably the most wonderful river in the world. It has made Egypt possible by turning an arid wilderness into the richest land in the world. It has provided at the same time an admirable commercial highway and made easy the transportation of building materials. The ancient Egyptians were thus enabled to utilize the granite of Assuan for the splendid structures of the hundred gated Thebes and of Memphis and even for those on Tanis, on the Mediterranean coast.

At a time when the people of the British Isles were clad in skins of wild beasts and offered human sacrifices upon the stone altars of the Druids Egypt was the center of a rich and refined civilization. Most of the development of Egypt was due to the Nile, which not only watered and fertilized the soil annually, but was and is one of the best natural highways in the world.

From the beginning of winter to the end of spring—that is, while the Nile is navigable—the north wind blows steadily up the stream with sufficient force to drive sailing boats against the current at a fair pace, while, on the other hand, the current is strong enough to carry a boat without sails down against the wind except when it blows a gale. That is why the ancient Egyptians did not need steam power nor electric motors for the immense commerce that covered the Nile nor for barges carrying building materials for hundreds of miles.—New York Herald.

Birds as Oracles.

A most remarkable superstition of the Kenyans of Borneo is the consultation of birds. If, for example, a Kenyan has to undertake a long journey he will not risk it without having first consulted the "Bakki," a kind of hawk. If the hawk flies with its wings spread out to the right side it is a good sign, but if it goes to the left or flaps its wings then the journey is not begun in any circumstances. The next day the Kenyan tries once more until the hawk gives the sign which he wants. Thus the continuation of the journey depends on the flight of the birds. Some birds are of greater importance than others, and also to the singing of the birds attention is given. Other animals are also consulted, and the sea Dyaks call every animal a "bird" when they consult it.

During the absence of Mr. Laurier in the west Sir Richard Cartwright is acting Premier. What a jolt it would give this country if Sir Richard were to switch it on to an economic tack. Heavens! When Mr. Laurier returned there would be nothing left of the party but Sir Richard.

Ottawa Journal.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his Winnipeg speech told how he had little use for the word "luck." In the sense in which he uses the word the meaning D'Israeli had in mind when he said "We make our fortunes and we call them fate," the Premier is undoubtedly right. And yet in another sense there is that factor of chance, luck, coincidence or Providence call it what you will that seems to follow some men faithfully all their lives. And without trying to take any credit from Sir Wilfrid for what his brains, character and personality have achieved, it must be acknowledged that this odd chance has played mighty often in his favor all through his political career.

Winnipeg Free Press.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's declaration that no Dominion election is in sight should quiet the apprehensions of the eastern Opposition journals, which, with fear and trembling, have deduced from Sir Wilfrid's platform activity an intention on his part to make an early appeal to the people. Barring some national crisis, there should be no Dominion election before 1912 at the earliest. By that time the new redistribution of seats, based upon the census of 1911, will have been made. The fact that that redistribution will greatly increase the west's representation in Parliament may have had something to do with Sir Wilfrid's present pilgrimage. The three prairie Provinces alone will send over forty members to the next Dominion Parliament—thus completely distancing the Maritime Provinces, which have three representatives in the Government as contrasted with only one from the middle west.

A CURSED DIAMOND.

The Gleaming Gem Was Fatal to All Who Touched It.

By KARL K. SHIMANSKY.
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

The captain sat in his little cabin with his head in his hands. He was thinking hard and of the mortgage that fell due in only ten days.

"And I haven't a cent of money, and I don't see how I can get any," he thought. He would not have minded so much if it had not been for his wife and children. His wife could sail with him if they had to give up their home, but his little ones must go to school, and he knew that "mother" would never leave them alone on shore.

"Cheer up, Captain Mathews—cheer up!" cried a hearty voice at his door. "We're about to sail." And the boyish second mate went clattering down the passageway.

"Henry is a fine young fellow," so flattered the captain, "and big hearted. He offered to lend me all his money, but I wouldn't touch it, for he needs all he can get to support his old mother."

Jenkins, the first mate, was not on hand.

"All aboard!" shouted Henry. "Hey! Hey!" cried a familiar voice from far up the dock.

"Huh!" grunted the second mate. "Here comes Jenkins with a passenger. That's strange. I never saw him so enterprising."

By this time the two sweating runners had reached the boat and rushed aboard. Henry gave the signal cord a jerk, and slowly the Salt Spray pulled out of her dock. The fat man who had accompanied the mate came panting up to the bridge.

"How soon will we be out of sight of land?" he asked hurriedly.

"Can't tell," replied Henry. "There comes somebody up the dock."

It was an Italian, running at full speed and crying to them to wait.

"Hurry, hurry!" screamed the fat man, not to the Italian, but to Henry, a public library these days? A man may now buy the best in literature in good binding at from 15c to 25c a volume—books such as were sold a generation ago at a couple of dollars and much higher. For a few dollars anyone may possess all the books it is advisable to have. People should not read to much. We are told by President Eliot of Harvard that it is better to know a few books well than to form a habit of skimming over many. The only real justification for the expenditure of large sums of money on a public library in this age of extremely cheap books would seem to be to maintain an institution where expert advice might be had as to courses in reading. Nine-tenths of the patrons of a library desire only to be amused, and so they read the latest frothy story. Ninety-nine people of a hundred who patronize a library read at random. They flounder around from one thing to another and those who desire to systematize their reading have to depend on themselves. Without expert direction the average Ontario library is of extremely small value from an educational standpoint.

Prodigality of Life in Ancient Egypt. The reckless prodigality with which in ancient Egypt the upper classes squandered away the labor and lives of the people is perfectly startling. In this respect, as the monuments yet remaining abundantly prove, they stand alone and without a rival. We may form some idea of the almost incredible waste when we hear that 2,000 men were occupied for three years in carrying a single stone from Elephantine to Sais, that the canal of the Red sea alone cost the lives of 120,000 Egyptians and that to build one of the pyramids required the labor of 380,000 men for twenty years.

at the same time convulsively rubbing a small package which he held securely under an arm.

The boat was now twelve or fifteen feet away from the dock. But the Italian, with a cry of "I'll get you yet," sprang for the side. His foot tripped as he leaped, and he dived into the water toward the stern of the Spray.

There was a cry of "Man overboard!" and a great scurrying on the part of the boat's crew and the people on the dock. The engines of the Salt Spray were stopped, but too late.

"A strange fellow that Jenkins brought aboard this afternoon," observed Henry to the captain that evening.

"Yes," replied the captain; "he gave him $25 for getting him here safely. This afternoon he told me his story. He said that he had been a lawyer in Italy for many years. Two weeks ago a man came to him and said that he had in his possession a blue diamond, a very rare and valuable stone. It originally belonged to a distant relative of the client. When the relative died, instead of willing the gem to his son, who was a good-for-nothing young man, he gave it to the client. The son got together a gang of Italian toughs for the purpose of recovering the diamond. They were pursuing him when he went to Hagerton for advice. The client told Hagerton," continued the captain, "that if anything happened to him he should take the jewel and flee to England. The next day the client was found dead."

The Salt Spray was a tramp freighter, and Mr. Hagerton was the only passenger on this trip. He took his meals with the captain and the mates in their little mess room. He was a very interesting man. He was in unusually good spirits the next morning. At breakfast he told the first mate the tale that Captain Mathews had detailed to Henry the night before.

"Have you opened the box that contains the jewel?" inquired Mate Henry.

"Why, no, I haven't," answered the lawyer, "but if you will wait a moment I will get it and open it here."

In a few minutes he reappeared with a package under his arm. Henry noticed that it was the same one that he had carried when he had run up the dock.

"Now, gentlemen, I am going to show you an almost priceless jewel. It has been in the same family for several hundred years, and four generations back a curse was placed upon it. You may laugh, gentlemen, but three times in the last fifty years men have been found lying on the floor dead with the jewel case open beside them. Two of the men were thieves, and the other was my client that I told you about, and he died only last week."

"Hey, captain!" shouted the petty officer, who was on the bridge. "Captain, the boat's men fell down a 'atch and busted his leg."

The two mates rushed out to the assistance of the unfortunate sailor. The captain paused an instant to snatch up his portable medicine chest and then lumbered after them. The lawyer was the only one that remained behind. The three officers ran down the ladder to the hold, where they found the boatswain lying unconscious with the blood streaming from a cut on his head. In a few minutes the captain arose from his side and exclaimed in a disgusted voice:

"Nothing broken; only a little cut on his head. He's drunk. Put him to bed for a couple of days, and he will

DANCING STARS.

The Twinklers Seem to Jump When Viewed Through a Telescope.

One of the most interesting things appearing in the telescope when that instrument is pointing heavenward is the appearance of jumping stars. Of course we can see stars twinkle without a telescope, but with a telescope they may be seen to jump and actually to dance. The cause is the same—mixing currents of light and heavy air causing refraction or bending of the rays of light coming from the star. We can see the same phenomenon by looking at a small object in a room through the air directly over a hot radiator. The object seems to jump and dance as if playing hide and seek with itself.

This jumping in the telescope or twinkling to the naked eye has also been explained by what is called interference. If two sources of light are placed close to each other, then on a screen placed properly we can catch an alternate band of white and dark lines. Of course if the eye be placed at a dark line it can see neither source of light. The production of these dark lines is accomplished by different light waves reaching the screen in opposite phases so as to blot out or cancel the effect due to each. In like manner it can be shown that if the star has polychromatic light it can and has actually been observed to change color from this effect alone.

The best time to observe this effect of star dancing is on a cold, crisp night. The telescope should be pointed to a twinkling star as near the horizon as can be found, as to see a star on the horizon we have to look through much more atmosphere than to see one in the zenith, and there is consequently more chance for varied currents.—St. Louis Republic.

GREENWICH MERIDIAN.

Its Relation to Standard Time in This Country.

Standard time is the time in common use regulating the ordinary affairs of life. It is derived from the sun. Leaving out of account small irregularities of the solar motion that are of no consequence for our present purpose, when that celestial body is on the meridian of any place we call the time of that place noon, or 12 o'clock. It follows that when it is noon at any given place it is similarly noon at all other places having the same meridian. As the sun rises in the east and sets in the west, it is evident that when it is crossing the meridian of any place it must have already passed that of places to the eastward and not yet reached that of places to the westward. In other words, when it is noon in the given place it is forenoon in places to the westward and afternoon in places to the eastward.

Now, 15 degrees of longitude correspond exactly to one hour of time difference, and therefore the local times of the several standard meridians differ from Greenwich by an even number of hours. In the United States the standard time meridians are those whose longitudes are west of Greenwich 60, 75, 90, 105 and 120 degrees. The time of these meridians is respectively four, five, six, seven and eight hours earlier than Greenwich time because the sun in traveling across the sky from east to west passes the Greenwich meridian before it reaches the American meridians.—New York American.

HERE'S CERTAINTY

We Will Cure You of Kidney Disease or Furnish You Medicine Free.

We know we can furnish medicine that will almost always effect easy and positive relief for kidney ailments. We are so certain of this that we sell every bottle with our printed guarantee that the medicine shall cost the purchaser nothing should it fail to do as we claim.

We have been recommending and selling this medicine to a considerable extent, and are receiving the best kind of evidence that it is doing exactly as we said it would. That's why we can safely and truthfully ask all our neighbors to try it at our risk.

Our treatment consists of Rexall Kidney Remedy, which is one of the finest pharmaceutical preparations we know of for overcoming kidney, bladder and urinary derangements, and associate ailments.

We want everyone who suffers from any kidney or urinary disease to come to our store and get a bottle of Rexall Kidney Remedy. They can try as many as three large bottles with the distinct understanding that we will return every penny paid us for the medicine at the mere hint of dissatisfaction. Certainly we know of no stronger reason as to why you should at least give Rexall Kidney Remedy a trial. We would not dare make this offer were we not positive that the result will be as we proclaim. Rexall Kidney Remedy.

will carry him to his cabin," said the captain. "I can't find a thing on him that looks like a wound. Ah, here we are. Here are the same marks on his fingers that there were on Hagerton. Look."

Henry saw several little slits on his fingers and thumb.

Mathews calmly picked up the fatal box and opened it. Within lay a beautiful blue diamond gleaming brightly.

"It looks innocent enough, doesn't it?" asked the captain. "But I want to try something. Have you a pencil?"

Henry handed him one wonderingly.

Mathews took it and tried to take out the jewel. The instant he touched the diamond it sank into the plush cushions, and five tiny prongs shot up and dug their points into the pencil.

"They are poisoned," said Henry.

The captain cut away the plush with his knife and disclosed a set of coils and springs. Engraved on the bottom of the box were the words, "This is the curse."

"If the diamond was mine I could pay off my mortgage," said the captain gloomily.

"It is yours," answered Henry, smiling and handing him the paper that made him owner of the diamond and the curse.

STEALING A DOG.

Sir Edwin Landseer's Experience With a London Fancier.

Sir Edwin Landseer, the animal painter, one time was about to put the finishing touches to the portrait of a dog belonging to a nobleman and was expecting a visit from his model when the owner arrived in a state of great perturbation without the dog. The animal had been stolen. After talking over the loss with Sir Edwin the owner decided to leave the matter in the painter's hands, together with a ten pound note as a reward for the recovery of the dog.

Sir Edwin's acquaintance with the dog fanciers was large, and he summoned to his aid one Jem Smith, who he thought might put him on the right track. He showed the man the picture and the banknote and promised that if the dog was restored no questions should be asked. Six weeks later Smith arrived at the studio leading the missing dog by a piece of string. "Here is your £10," said the artist, "and I suppose I must ask no questions. But now that the affair is done with you may just as well tell me about it."

After a moment of hesitation the man confessed that he himself was the thief. "You, you thundering rascal!" exclaimed Sir Edwin. "Then why on earth have you kept us in suspense all this time?" "Well, you see, gov'ner," was the answer, "I stole the dog, but the gentleman I sold him to kept 'im so jolly close that I hadn't a chance of nicking him again till yesterday, and that's the truth, s'elp me."

The Handwriting.

"If you look about you," said the ominous acquaintance, "you will see the handwriting on the wall."

"The handwriting on the wall does not worry me," replied Senator Sorghum, "so long as they don't go rum-maging into my private memoranda." —Washington Star.

Sinking Spells Every Few Days

"At the time I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I was having sinking spells every few days. My hands and feet would get cold; I could scarcely breathe, and could feel myself gradually sinking away until I would be unconscious. Those about me could not tell there was life in me. After these spells I would be very weak and nervous, sleepless and without appetite; had neuralgia in my head and heart. After taking the remedy a short time all this disappeared and in a few weeks all the heart trouble was gone."

"OLD DATE."

A Young Girl Graduate and the College Professor.

By ELIZABETH PARKER.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

When I was invited by Mrs. Winston to meet Professor Dayton, the man whom everybody was talking about for having made so many remarkable scientific discoveries, I was somewhat surprised. I was but eighteen years old, didn't know anything about science and seemed to myself to be an unfit person to be asked to meet a scientific man.

But there was not much going on in our quiet town, and mamma said there would certainly be some other young persons invited or an invitation would not have been sent to me. So I accepted. I arrived late and found a mixture of young and middle aged persons standing about in little groups. I saw Sue Bond standing alone and joined her. I had been "out" but little, and as she is one of my intimate friends I felt reassured at tying myself to her. I saw Mrs. Winston, who was chatting with a dandified young fellow with a very high shirt collar and very long cuffs, look at me in a way that led me to believe she meditated getting me away from Sue and attaching me to the young man. I was not averse to her doing so, for I dreaded lest I should fall into the hands of some of the learned men invited to meet the professor, if not the professor himself. Then I saw her bringing the young man toward me, and I knew that my prognostications were correct.

I was very diffident. Indeed, I was so intent upon thinking how I would start conversation with the young man that I heard nothing of Mrs. Winston's words of introduction. But when left alone with him I hadn't thought of anything to say to him. He soon put me at my ease by rattling off several commonplace remarks, which gave me time to find my tongue.

"WELL, I DECLARE!"

"I don't understand," I remarked, "why we young people are invited to meet this professor. I suppose Mrs. Winston has invited us to fill up and will surround him with the older ones."

He gave me a pleasant smile, showing a set of very white, regular teeth, and said, "Surely you're not afraid of him?"

"I wouldn't get caught with him for half an hour on any account," I replied. "What could we talk about?"

"Oh, he doesn't talk shop in company," he replied.

"Do you know him?"

"Very well. He lectured at my alma mater."

"Have you been graduated?"

"Certainly. Why do you ask?"

"Why, you don't look old enough."

He seemed to be much amused at this and told me that he had been out of college quite awhile, but admitted that he had entered very young.

"Oh, well," I said, "if you are a college graduate you might coach me upon some topic that would enable me in case I should meet this learned man to open conversation with him."

"Certainly. Upon what subject would you like to draw him out?"

"Oh, I leave that to you. I don't know anything about any of them. I have only been to the high school and couldn't learn even the elements of any science while there."

"Well, I'll tell you what you do. Say 'Professor, is it true that the discovery of radium has upset the theory of the conservation of energy?'"

"I couldn't remember all those big words. Can't you give me something easier?"

"You might ask him to tell you what your own sex has had to do with recent scientific discoveries. That will draw him out on a subject that should be interesting to you."

"What would he say?"

"What would he say? Good gracious, do you suppose I know? Do you take me for a scientific phenomenon? I am simply giving you a pointer for the professor."

"But you have heard him lecture?"

"Yes."

"Then you must know things he has said. Tell me some of them."

"His lectures are very dry. He has little faculty for making scientific truths interesting. His forte is in getting his nose down to his test tubes and blowpipes in his laboratory and digging out things that way."

"I shouldn't think such a man would care for society, and I should expect him to be awfully hard to talk to."

"On the contrary, 'Old Date,' as the students call him, is very fond of society."

"How old is he?"

"Somewhere between thirty and forty."

"Thirty isn't old—that is, not very old."

"All the professors are old to the students. They always prefix 'old' to the names of members of the faculty and cut off one or more syllables."

"Where is Old Date, as you call him? Is he in this room?"

"I don't see him," he replied, looking about him. "Would you like me to find him and bring him to introduce to you?"

"Oh, heavens!" I gasped. Then, remembering myself, I put on what dignity I could assume and added: "If there is any one you wish to talk to don't hesitate to leave me. I dare say Mrs. Winston will take care of me."

"Not by any means. You have talked so much of Professor Dayton that I thought you might like to know him. I assure you I should consider it a deprivation to give you up to him."

At that moment Mr. Winston approached with a baldheaded man in spectacles whom she introduced to me and took the young man I had been chatting with away to introduce to some one else.

The rest of the evening was very dull to me, and I was glad when I saw

WORLD'S DEBT TO CANADA

A Wonderful Achievement

Discovery of "Fruit-a-tives" has meant health for all

Canada's fame does not rest solely on her furs and wheat fields. Her rise in the esteem of the world is not due to her Cobalt mines. It is the work of her great men that has made her great. A graduate of McGill University has won lasting renown for his original researches in the realms of Physics.

Everyone knows that fruit is wholesome, when eaten judiciously. Physicians generally recognize the fact that fruit juices have a beneficial effect on the various organs of the body.

It remained for a Canadian physician to discover a process whereby the medicinal action of fruit could be so increased as to make the intensified juices a wonderful cure.

"Fruit-a-tives" is this combination of fruit juices and tonics. Since its introduction to the public, "Fruit-a-tives" has met with a success accorded to no other medicine in the world. The reason is plain. "Fruit-a-tives" is the one remedy that is actually made of fruit, and is the only remedy that naturally cures Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Headaches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Backache, Kidney and Skin Troubles. see me. I gave the required permission.

The next day the weather was very warm, and in the afternoon I sat out on the piazza overlooking the garden. About 5 o'clock I saw the young man I had met the evening before coming. He was dressed immaculately in white flannel and an orchid in his button-hole. As soon as he came near he lifted his hat and, turning at the gate, joined me. He looked so pleased at seeing me that I was quite set up. I had never had any attention from a real grownup young man before, my oldest beau being less than twenty.

I felt more at ease sitting in my own wicker chair at home, and, flattered by such marked attention from a grownup man, I was quite myself. I'm not disposed to sit mute any more than any other girl when I am at ease, and I kept up my end of the conversation very well, if I do say it myself. But I think my caller contributed to this. He had a way of drawing me out. Indeed, I got to gabbling without realizing that I was doing all the talking. But he seemed so interested in all I said and listened so attentively, was so deferential, that I could not help talking on. It was an hour before I bethought myself that I, a child of a girl, had been monopolizing a conversation with a young man who might be twenty-five or twenty-six years old. Then he rose to go, and I was quite mortified that I would have no opportunity to redeem myself by permitting him to say a few things himself. In withdrawing he said he had passed a delightful hour, and I showed my own appreciation of him by asking him to call again soon, to which he replied that he would be leaving the next morning. As I bade him goodby I could not but wish that he would delay his departure. Somehow by this time I had forgotten his stylish dress and had come to consider him quite sensible.

For twenty-five years we have studied the business troubles of the retail storekeeper, and how to overcome them.

This hasn't been voluntary on our part, because merchants in every line of business have demanded protection.

The National Cash Register of to-day is the result of suggestions and demands from merchants just like yourself.

Every merchant will buy a National Cash Register when he is convinced that it will

1. Detect Mistakes
2. Prevent Losses
3. Increase Trade
4. Increase Profits

We can prove that a National Cash Register will do these things. National Cash Registers are sold on Monthly payments. They actually save each month more than the monthly payment amounts to.

Investigate Now While The Matter Is Before You

If you heard of a line of goods which you didn't have in your store, and on which it could be proven that over 800,000 fellow merchants were making more money than on anything else in their stores, you wouldn't lose any time investigating that line of goods.

800,000 merchants are using National Cash Registers.

The man who is using an obsolete system is losing more money through mistakes in cash sales, in giving change, through forgetting to record credit sales, through careless clerks, and in a dozen other ways, than would pay over and over again for his National Cash Register. It pays its way and returns big dividends.

We have Registers of every style and type to suit every business. All we ask is for you to investigate—look into it—see for yourself—make us prove that the National Cash Register will save you money. It costs you nothing to find out. Just drop a card for literature to

"I have been troubled with catarrh for a great many years, and always trying something for it, but was able only to secure temporary relief until I used Peruna."

FREEZING CAVERNS.

Subterranean Caves That Are Lined With Crystalline Ice.

There are deep cavities and tunnelled recesses in the earth far away from sunlight and held in the tight embrace of rocky strata where secret hoards of glittering ice find habitation all the year round. Yet down in these queer places the ice is as clear and crystalline as any that nature maintains in the open air. Moreover, it occurs on a truly grand and massive scale.

Imagine thick underground ice walls and floors and craftily fissured columns beautiful in shape and color streaming from roof to floor of lofty rock chambers! And under the slow drip, drip, drip, of percolating water this same ice learns to fashion itself into cave adornments—frozen water drops, curling slopes, stalactites and stalagmites of fantastic shape and rainbow hues.

Subterranean cold waves, or "glaciers," as they are frequently called, crop up in some 300 scattered localities in Europe, Asia and America, but all, with rare exceptions, whether true ice caverns or grottoes and deep hollows,

THE ARCTIC PERIL

Peary's Method of Battling With Polar Conditions.

THE USE OF RELAY PARTIES.

Without This System, the Explorer Says, It Would Be a Physical Impossibility For Any Man to Reach the Pole and Return to Tell the Tale.

Many persons who have asked why, if Peary got to the pole, it was impossible for Cook to do so will find an answer in Commander Peary's own story in Hampton's. Although he does not mention Dr. Cook by name, Peary shows how impossible it would be for a man without his equipment and system to surmount the difficulties of such a journey. He says:

"Fortitude and endurance alone are not enough in themselves to carry a man to the north pole. Only with years of experience in traveling those regions, only with the aid of a large party also experienced in that character of work, only with the knowledge of arctic detail and the equipment necessary to prepare himself and his party for any and every emergency, is it possible for a man to reach that long sought goal and return."

"In order that the reader may understand this journey over the ice of the polar sea it is necessary that the theory and practice of pioneer and supporting parties should be fully understood."

"The use of relay parties in arctic work is not new, but the idea was carried further in the last expedition of the Peary Arctic club than ever before."

"Without this system it would be a physical impossibility for any man to reach the north pole and return to tell the tale."

"First—Because a single division, comprising either a small or a large number of men and dogs, could not possibly drag all the way to the pole and back (some 900 miles) as much food and liquid fuel as the men and dogs of that division would consume during the many weeks of the journey."

"Yes. I shall be sorry not to meet you again. Goodby."

So was I; sorry enough. In less than half an hour Helen Martin called me up on the telephone and asked me to come round in the evening. Professor Dayton was to be there—only a few people informally. I had no interest in "Old Date," but I had a great deal of interest in a certain young man who was to be that evening at the Martins'.

When I entered the Martins' drawing room I was the second guest to arrive. The young man whom I now met for the third time was the only one who preceded me. He was chatting with Helen Martin and as I entered looked at me with a very comical expression on his face. I supposed it had something to do with my having, after all, been invited. As I approached the two Helen said:

"Evelyn, I don't know if you have met Professor Dayton. Professor, this is my friend Miss Cummings."

"Well, I declare!"

My exclamation was not especially intelligible to Helen, but it was to Professor Dayton. His eyes fairly danced with amusement.

"I'm 'Old Date,'" he said, "true enough."

I was so mortified, so angry, that I turned with the intention of striding out of the room; but, recollecting myself, I turned again and, with hot cheeks, stammered:

"You shouldn't have!"

"Pardon me," he interrupted. "You are quite right. No one has any right even for amusement to snail under false colors. The temptation was too strong for me. Any penance you name I will do."

And I took care that he should do ample penance. I kept him dangling about me for six months after his first proposal and did not accept him until he had made a dozen.

An Infamy.

Some years ago we remember meeting at the door of a secondhand bookshop an excited Irishman. He had just bought the "Irish Melodies" for a shilling when he turned round on the bookseller and burst out, "But I could kill ye for selling these immortal gems so cheap!"—London Athenaeum.

HE PLAYED CRITIC.

The Composer Tried to Be Funny and Got a Surprise.

Signor Leoncavallo, the composer, recounted an amusing experience that befell him in a theater where he occupied a stall one evening to hear the performance of his "Pagliacci."

At the finale a stranger sitting next him kept exclaiming enthusiastically: "What a masterpiece! What a perfect masterpiece!"

Leoncavallo, imagining himself utterly unknown in the audience, thought it would be fine fun to play the critic of his own work, so chimed in ironically:

"A masterpiece? I don't in the least agree with you, sir. I'm a musician myself, so know what I'm talking about. The fact is this opera is a worthless production and brimful of imitations and plagiarisms. For instance, that cavatina is fished bodily from Berlioz, the duet in the first act is all Gounod, while the finale is a sorry copy of one you will find in Verdi."

Next day Leoncavallo drove to the railway station and bought the leading local journal. On comfortably seating himself in the train he opened it and was agast with astonishment at encountering the following lines:

Next day Leoncavallo drove to the railway station and bought the leading local journal. On comfortably seating himself in the train he opened it and was agast with astonishment at encountering the following lines:

"Signor Leoncavallo's opinion on 'Pagliacci.' Declaration of plagiarism. Confession of a composer bereft of all originality."

The great Italian master added, "Evidently my neighbor was a journalist who had dogged me, but to this day I have cold shivers every time I recall the incident."

The Nature of Friendship.

Friendship may be fostered, but cannot be forced. Two are as one, not because it is in the will of either, but because it is in the nature of both. When souls of similar fiber encounter each other the gods preside at the meeting. I may not cockily say, "I will make this man my friend." He either is or is not my friend without any decision of mine or his. The ages have been shaping the two of us, and if we fit into each other well and good; if not, we know it instinctively and are worlds apart though we toast our shins at the same fire and bandy words till doomsday.—Richard Wightman in Metropolitan Magazine.

number of men and dogs, could not possibly drag all the way to the pole and back (some 900 miles) as much food and liquid fuel as the men and dogs of that division would consume during the many weeks of the journey.

"Second.—It is absolutely necessary that the arduous work of trail breaking for the first two-thirds of the distance should be done by one division after another in succession in order to save the strength of the main party for its final dash alone.

"Third.—When the supplies of one sledge after another have been consumed the drivers of these sledges and the dogs are superfluous mouths which cannot be fed from the scanty supply of provisions being dragged forward over the ice.

"Fourth.—Each division being an independent unit, these divisions can be withdrawn at intervals from the main party without affecting the main party.

"Fifth.—At the very end, when the supporting parties have performed their important work of trail breaking and transportation of supplies, the main party for the final dash must be small and carefully selected, as a small party can travel so much faster than a large one.

"The pioneer party was one unit division, made up of four of the most active and experienced men of the expedition, with sledges lightly loaded with five or six days' provisions, drawn by the best dog teams that could be selected from the entire pack. When we started from Cape Columbia this pioneer party, headed by Bartlett, went out twenty-four hours in advance of the main party. Later on, when we reached the time of continuous daylight and sunlight through the twenty-four hours, the pioneer party was but twelve hours in advance of the main party.

"The duty of this pioneer party was to make a march in every twenty-four hours in spite of every obstacle, excepting, of course, some impassable lead. Whether there was a deep snow or violent winds to be faced or mountainous pressure ridges to be climbed over, the march of the pioneer party must be made, for past experience had proved that whatever distance was covered by the advance party with its light sledges could be covered in less time by the main party even with heavily loaded sledges, because the main party, having the trail to follow, was not obliged to waste time in reconnoitering.

"In other words, the pioneer party was the pacemaker of the expedition, and whatever distance it made was the measure of accomplishment for the main party. The leader of the pioneer party, in the first instance Bartlett, would start out ahead of his division, usually of the snowshoes. Then the light sledges of the party would follow after. Thus the leader of the pioneer division was pioneering ahead of his own party, and that whole division was pioneering ahead of the main party.

"One great advantage which I had on this expedition was that, owing to the size of my party, whenever the men in this pioneer division became exhausted with their arduous labor and lack of sleep I could withdraw them into the main party and send out a fresh division to take their place. A large party is absolutely necessary to success."

SALT WATER.

Deep Seas Are More Saline Than Those That Are Shallow.

The density of sea water depends upon the quantity of saline matter it contains. The proportion is generally about 3 or 4 per cent, though it varies in different places. The ocean contains more salt in the southern than in the northern hemisphere, and the Atlantic contains more than the Pacific. The greatest proportion of salt in the Pacific is in the parallel of 22 degrees north latitude and 17 degrees south latitude. Near the equator it is less, and in the polar seas it is least, from the melting of the ice.

The saltness varies with the seasons. In these regions, and the fresh water, being lighter, is uppermost. Rain makes the surface of the sea fresher than the interior parts, and the influx of rivers renders the ocean less salt at their estuaries.

Deep seas are more saline than those that are shallow, and inland seas communicating with the main are less salt, from the rivers that flow into them. To this, however, the Mediterranean is an exception, owing to great evaporation and the influx of salt currents from the Black sea and the Atlantic. The water in the strait of Gibraltar at the depth of 670 fathoms is four times as salt as that at the surface.—St. James' Gazette.

Lore of the Clover.

Any one who carries about a four leaved clover will be lucky and will have the power of discovering ghosts or evil spirits. With it under the pillow the lover may insure dreams of the beloved one. A fragment in the shoe of a traveler insures a safe journey. Of the five leaved clover it is declared that if it be worn on the left side of a maiden's dress or fastened behind the hall door the Christian name of the first man who enters will be the same as that of the future husband. The power of the four leaved shamrock for good is familiar to all from Lover's pretty and once popular song, the speaker in which pictures what she would do should she find the magic plant:

I would play the enchanter's part and scatter bliss around,
And not a tear or aching heart should in the world be found.

THEY SIT AND LOOK.

Women Who Watch For Celebrities In a New York Restaurant.

"I always wonder," said a New York woman who lunches out a good deal, "what satisfaction the women get out of life who flock to a certain fashionable uptown restaurant at lunchtime just to see celebrities.

"They look as if they cannot afford to be there, and the truth is they do not apparently go there for food. I have watched them ordering and noted what was brought them, and almost invariably it is some such thing as cafe parfait, or an ice of some kind, or a cup of tea or of chocolate and a sandwich.

"They sit and look. The moment some stage celebrity comes in there is a craning of necks, and you hear excited whisperings, 'Oh, there's So-and-so!' mentioning an actress or a matinee idol, and the neck turning keeps on until a fresh subject for scrutiny comes in.

"You can see this sort of thing every lunchtime at this restaurant. There is a regular contingent of these rubber-neckers, and they are not visitors from the far west, either."—New York Sun.

Growing Corn For Cob Pipes.

Probably not one smoker in a hundred who likes the "great American pipe"—the corn-cob—is aware of the fact that many acres in Ohio, Illinois, Missouri and Nebraska are devoted to raising corn for the especial purpose of producing cobs suitable for fashioning into pipe bowls. The grain itself is marketed, of course, but the cob on which it grows is the real harvest and is cut carefully into proper lengths, smoothed and polished, the soft inner pulp being gouged out by specially constructed machinery. The corn-cob pipe goes to every country in the world where men smoke and is especially in favor in Australia and New Zealand, where it is regarded as characteristically American, because it suggests the idea of Yankee ingenuity. The brier is the favorite with Englishmen, who are probably the greatest pipe smokers in the world.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

E. E. JESSOP.

Some of us kept warm during the past winter, but how many of us are keeping cool during the present summer? There are various forms of appliances, fixed and movable, for heating rooms in cold weather, but there seems to be a complete absence of corresponding means for cooling our hot rooms in warm weather. A correspondent, writing in from the country, is clear-eyed enough to see the need, but not inventive enough to meet it. But he supplies a serviceable bit of nomenclature when he talks of his long-felt want as an "anti-stove." He seems to have in mind a light, simple, inexpensive apparatus or "contraption" which can be set down in the middle of a group of sweltering, smothering people and made to diffuse a comfortable coolness. What he wants, in fact, is the oil stove reversed.

Who can help him? Our own suggestion is that the opposite of oil might be found in ammonia. Just as the one fluid breeds heat, so the other produces coolness—as witness its employment in cold storage and in ice-making. The inventor who can utilize ammonia to make a compact and portable cold storage plant for parlor and bedroom use would doubtless gain a comfortable fortune and would surely earn the thanks of the public.

One would not mind getting the dinner—we quote not literatim but from a general recollection of many comments—if it were not for the dishes afterwards. A dinner represents artistic endeavor, work in which the face may be toasted and the back tied up in little, kinky, painful knots from much bending and peering into the oven, but nevertheless creative work in which the soul of the artist rises jubilantly above the difficulties. The dishes are a sad and sodden anti-climax.

With them staring the family in the face from the family board, eating takes on the coarse form of gluttony. Just when one feels fortified to look fate in the eyes and would turn to music, wit, and laughter there enter the sad faced dish pan, the threatening dish cloth, and all the tea towels. One may trifle with duty and endeavor to evade it by resorting to the doubtful expedient of "stacking" the debris in the sink, but there has never been a household so philosophic as to retain its peace of mind with a kitchen cluttered with unwashed china. The silent protest which comes therefrom will destroy anything like serenity.

There never has been found until now a satisfactory way out of the difficulty. Frequently it has been

WHY OUR RELIGION FAILS

The Most Common Tests of Popular Religion are Those of Selfishness

"Love never faileth."—I. Cor. xiii. 8.

Much of our religious thinking is still in the bondage of a cowardly selfishness, for to many it means no more than a system or scheme by which they secure to themselves future advantages not to be conferred on others, and by which they find refuge from the personal consequences of their wrongdoing. Is it any better to be anxious to save your own soul than it is to seek to save your skin?

A religious man is one whose soul is saved, as though the finest thing possible for a being destined to the glory of his Creator was to be quite certain that he had secured for himself a firm footing in a shaky universe, had somehow procured a spiritual umbrella against that rain of righteous judgment.

Men are urged to religious avowals in order that their sins may be forgiven, that they may make sure of heaven, or that they may feel at peace with their God, or that they may be happy. Religion is presented as a couch, a refuge, a cure, a balm, a treasure, as though the only motives that could possibly move our hearts were appeals to cupidity, to pleasure, or to slothful ease.

The selfishness of our religion has enervated it. It is dead, because it has eaten out its own heart; it means a programme of profit, with no appeal to

OUR NOBLER PASSIONS.

It has little power over those who follow their passions, because its promises are too vague, and little influence over those of higher thinking, because its appeals are too base.

How long will any true man feel moved by, or care much about, the promise of an armchair paradise for himself? How much enthusiasm, fervor, lasting passion will come out of contemplating a perpetual box seat in heaven? And, even though our hearts do ache and are burdened by our own guilt, we know there can be no peace by any factitious blotting out of our sins; we need a cure rather than a cover for guilt.

True, the teacher of Nazareth spoke of rest for the weary, of for-givenness for the erring, of peace for the troubled, and incidentally of blessedness beyond. But these things were not the inducements, the motives he presented to men called to follow him. He offered them peace, but a sword; not rest, but toil; not future felicity, but present service; not so much to know that their sins were taken away as the chance to take others' sin away.

Religion has reached its heights when it has called for harness, when it has appealed to the heroic, when it has meant the chance to fling life gloriously away, sublime self-forgetfulness, in noble sacrifice and service to find the full, rich, glorious life. In the call of self-giving rather than self-saving, there is that which reaches all men and draws most of all the best of us and

THE BEST IN US ALL.

Though life does mean pain and toil, true men look for relief not in freedom from either, but in toils and pains which they shall gladly choose to bear. The cure for the ills that rise from our own necessities is to bear the sorrows that rise from the needs of others. Worthy souls seek to lose their own sorrows not in a sorrow free world but in the struggle to make a world that turns sorrow into joy.

Never by looking to our motives of self-seeking, never by appealing to our weak longings for ease, can religion win us in any large or lasting way. The power of Christianity is due to the fact that, rightly known, it makes no such appeal, but it offers us a magnificent programme of toil and service; it bids us forget ourselves in the colossal task of saving our world.

And faith will fail as long as it means little things; it cannot fail as long as it means great love, splendid sacrifice, and worthy service. And when one feels the compulsion of a religion that bids him bring in a new day, bids him scorn all fear and loathe all sloth for the sake of a great, unselfish ideal, he loses sight of the old and childish fears about his own soul's welfare.

Seeing Jesus we see everything—all there is in the law for us, all that the prophets foretold and declare, all that God purposes for the redemption of men.

THE QUEEN'S CHAMBERS ELE

THEY HAVE IN THEM HOSTS OF ART TREASURES.

Her Majesty Expects All Those Under Her to do Their Duty Always.

Her Majesty's private apartments at Buckingham Palace consists of a suite of seven rooms, known as the Louis room, the Boudoir, the Tapestry Chamber, the Dressing and Bedrooms, Writing room and Waiting room. Considerable changes were made in the private apartments in all the royal palaces when the King ascended the throne and the arrangements in the apartments, which are the subject of this article, are of especial interest, as they were all carried out under what was practically the direct supervision of the Queen.

The rooms are on the second floor of the palace below the apartments occupied by the ladies in waiting with which they are in telephonic communication. The Tapestry room, which is really the library, is a very beautiful apartment.

THE BOOK SHELVES,

with which part of the walls are lined, contain many very valuable volumes, many of them being presents to the Queen from the immediate members of her family. An exquisite edition of Tennyson's poems is a present from the Prince of Wales. Shakespeare's works in twelve volumes was bestowed on her Majesty by the Duchess of Albany, and an early edition of Sir Walter Scott's novels was a recent gift from the Queen of Spain.

There is very little modern fiction to be found in the Queen's library, most of the books being German, French, and English classic works. A very interesting little volume is a birthday book containing the signatures of nearly every crowned head in Europe, beside those of many other distinguished persons. The book was given to the Queen many years ago by her father, whose signature was the first to be made in it.

There is also another book of autographs given to her Majesty by the Czar some years ago.

On one side of the Tapestry room is the Writing room, and on the other

THE QUEEN'S BOUDOIR.

The writing table in the former apartment is very large and covered with photographs of the Queen's most intimate friends and relatives.

It is at this table that the Queen conducts all her correspondence when the court is in residence at the palace.

Her Majesty attends to her correspondence in a very businesslike manner. Every morning after ten o'clock, unless occupied by some other important engagement, the Queen works at this table for a couple of hours, dictating some letters to Miss Knollys, and answering others herself.

It is perhaps not generally known that every letter addressed to the Queen is brought under her Majesty's notice. Hundreds of them are begging letters, which it would be quite impossible as well as inadvisable to take any notice of, but washed china. The silent protest which comes therefrom will destroy anything like serenity.

There never has been found until now a satisfactory way out of the difficulty. Frequently it has been suggested in the despair of after dinner repletion that wooden plates be used and that these be chucked into the fire, but this always has seemed to be an unintelligent solution and the situation never has remained desperate enough to warrant a trial. Now, in some large cities, it is said to be possible for the small householders to gather up their dishes, place them in a box, and have them removed by gentlemanly and careful washers who make a profession of cleaning up. The cost is small. Insurance against breakage is given. The burden of the dirty dish is removed from the overburdened hands of the housewife. If the idea be as economically sound as it is artistically beautiful, life can be made one glad, sweet song of dinners with no dish washing.

BIRDS OF NEW ZEALAND.

Almost all Killed by Imported Vermin.

Nearly every native bird in New Zealand will be absolutely protected by law this year, says the Advertiser. The animals protection act provides that 1910 and in every third year after that may at the discretion of the Governor in Council be declared a close season for native game. The absence of bird life in New Zealand is already most noticeable. T. Mackenzie, a member of the Government, as the result of a recent journey through the country writes:

"Between Nelson and Hokitika hardly any bird life at all is to be met with; the imported vermin have done their work of bird destruction only too well. In the region from Ross to the south, however, the tui and the pigeon are to be seen making bright the landscape with their presence.

"At the Forks I met a gentleman who took a great interest in bird life on the coast, and he told me that the weka, kiwi and kawakawa had disappeared, and he believed that the stoats and weasels killed every bird in the country. He had himself just lost a half grown black swan which he had reared. He had found it lying on its back with a gash in its throat.

"The stoats and weasels were often seen in the neighborhood of the lakes where the ducks made their nests, and was suspected that the vermin paid due attention to their eggs."

GREAT SHEEP COUNTRY.

One great feature is the large lambing yield, which enables New Zealand farmers to export about a quarter of their flocks annually without decreasing the total number. Nearly 815,000,000 worth of frozen mutton and lamb is exported per annum while the meat canning industry is rapidly growing, and has reached a value of over $500,000 a year.

Text, Matt. 17. 5.

Verse I. After six days—Luke's statement that it was "about eight days after" is doubtless only another way of reckoning a week. The variations in the accounts by Mark and Luke make an interesting study.

Peter . . . James . . . John—On several other occasions they were the picked companions of Jesus.

2. He was transfigured before them—It is idle to attempt to say just what took place. The word here used is, literally, "metamorphosed," which would have a familiar sound to any who were versed in classical lore. Perhaps that accounts for Luke's variation, "The fashion of his countenance was altered." Luke also mentions that the change occurred while he was praying. At any rate, though Jesus himself calls it a "vision" (verse 9), it was real—a revelation of reality, it may be, not accessible to the senses under all circumstances, but no mockery of the senses (Luke 9. 32).

His face did shine—Compare John's description of the glorified Jesus (Rev. 1). His appearing thus, in the likeness of his radiant resurrection body, would be a reassuring promise, to the perplexed disciples, that the death he had prophesied would not end all, but that, as he recently declared, he should come "in the glory of the Father."

3. Moses—Representing the old law, as Elijah represented the prophets. Their talking with Jesus suggests the unity of the Old and New Testaments. Luke alone gives us an inkling of their converse: "They spoke of his departure which he was about to accomplish at Jerusalem."

4. Peter answered—Once more he expresses his disapproval of any proceeding which should end in tragedy at Jerusalem. Luke says that he knew not what he was saying. But, ridiculous as the speech seems, it shows that the loyal apostle was eager to grasp at any straw which would indicate a way of escape for his Master. So he cries impetuously, "It is good for us to be here. Why face the disaster at Jerusalem? He wished to prolong their stay amid scenes of such ineffable wonder, rather than court danger, and offers with his own hands to set up a tent for each of these great personages.

5. A bright cloud—Compare the pillar of cloud in the wilderness, and the cloud that filled Solomon's temple. Like them, this was the external manifestation of the invisible Divine Presence, the cloud of God himself. One of the fathers explains it as the glory of the Trinity. Compare the record in 2 Pet. 1. 16-18.

This is my beloved Son—Although he was to be despised and rejected of men, the Father was well pleased with his course. His prophecy of death not only accorded with Moses and the prophets but agreed also with the divine purpose, and, accordingly, met with heavenly approval. His disciples, therefore, were not to try to find an easier way for him, but to hear him—an injunction which is found in all three Gospels, and distinguishes this voice from that heard at the Baptism.

6. They saw no one, save Jesus only—Moses, Elijah, God himself manifest in the shining cloud, all have disappeared from the scene.

the nine, and with many more (Mark says, "a great multitude about them, and the scribes") now confront Jesus upon his return.

15. My son . . . is epileptic—Matthew here uses the curious phrase "moonstruck," from whose Latin form we get our word "lunatic." From verse 18, however, it appears that Matthew shares the belief of the times that lunacy, epilepsy, and demon-possession all belong in the same category.

18. Jesus rebuked him—That is, the unclean spirit. The accounts in Mark and Luke are considerably fuller. The case was one of extreme complicity, but at the word of Jesus the demon went out, and the boy was cured from that hour.

19. Why could not we?—The charge against his disciples is once more their little faith. Mark says: "This kind can come out by nothing, save by prayer" (margin, "and fasting"). It was not because Christ was absent from them, for, when they went out two by two, they had taken power to cast out demons and had succeeded. But their faith in him had vanished, and they were trusting in themselves, a common danger with disciples of Jesus.

20. Faith as a grain of mustard seed—Small, but capable of great growth.

Ye shall say unto this mountain—A common proverbial expression for a matter of extreme difficulty.

MISTRESS OF THE ROBES.

Duchess of Devonshire Appointed by Queen Mary.

The Duchess of Devonshire, whom the Queen has appointed Mistress of the Robes, is the elder daughter of Lord Lansdowne and niece of the Duchess of Buccleuch, whom she succeeds in office.

The Mistress of the Robes is the only lady of the Queen's household who goes out of office on any change of Ministry. In earlier days the theory was that all the Queen's ladies held political appointments, but Queen Victoria early in her reign succeeded in changing the custom as regards all but the Mistress of the Robes. At the present day, of course, the appointment has no political significance, for the Duchess of Buccleuch has held it except for two short intervals, from 1856.

The duties of the Mistress of the Robes are confined to State occasions. She accompanies the Queen to any State ceremony and goes behind her in any procession. The post is always held by a Duchess, who is technically "mother of the Queen's maids." She no longer acts, of course, as a tiring woman to the Queen.

LATE KING'S NAME IN PARIS.

Paris is to have a street named after King Edward VII. Two municipal councillors, MM. Lemarchand and Le Corbeiller, have proposed to their colleagues that the late King's name should be given to a part of the Rue Sai t Martin. Thus the Rue Edouard VII. would be quite appropriately close to the Avenue Victoria.

FLYING VELVET.

"Mamma, come quick," called a wee lassie catching sight of a butterfly for the first time; "here's a pansy with wings!"

It is perhaps not generally known that every letter addressed to the Queen is brought under her Majesty's notice. Hundreds of them are begging letters, which it would be quite impossible as well as inadvisable to take any notice of, but the Queen is advised of their receipt. Many a humble supplicant in real distress has, however, often had her appeal answered.

Most of the Queen's social engagements are arranged at this table, and the enormous number of them may be judged from the fact that a large number of them are settled three years in advance.

THE BOUDOIR.

On the other side of the Tapestry Room is not used very frequently by the Queen. It is here that the various daily arrangements of the Court are settled, not always, however, by Her Majesty in person, though occasionally the Queen receives some of the Court officials in the boudoir when Her Majesty has some particular directions to give. There is a book kept in this room in which a record of all these "Court instructions" are kept, so that no question can subsequently arise as to what Her Majesty's mutual instructions are.

Beyond the Boudoir is the Louis Room. That is the official name of it, but it is usually called the Sitting Room, and is one of the most beautiful apartments in any of the royal palaces.

It is full of interesting possessions, many of them being presents to Her Majesty from various members of the English and other Royal families. There is a porcelain elephant, modelled by the Empress of Russia, the fire screen given to Her Majesty by the women of Denmark bearing thousands of signatures, a silver flower vase of exquisite design and workmanship, which was a present from the late Empress Frederick, and many other ornaments far too numerous to mention.

THE WAITING ROOM.

is beyond the sitting room of which it is really a part. Guests bidden in the ordinary way to Buckingham Palace are of course always "commanded" to come, but this form of invitation is never issued to those whom it pleases Her Majesty to honor by an invitation to the private apartments. The Queen writes a simple note asking the recipients of this coveted form of invitation to come to Buckingham Palace at a certain hour, usually either to lunch or afternoon tea; but no reply is expected to this invitation, except the recipient is prevented by illness or other serious circumstances from accepting it, when of course an apology for not being able to do so must be sent.

Adjoining the boudoir are Her Majesty's bedroom and dressing room. In the centre of the latter stands a large jewel case where all the jewels which the Queen may require are ready for use at any moment. Of course only a comparatively small number of the Royal jewels are kept in this case, the great majority of them being carefully put away in safes.

In no court in Europe is there greater order and less extravagance than in the English Royal Palaces, and yet it is an acknowledged fact by Royal visitors to the English Court that no where is the splendour and dignity of a great monarchy more fittingly maintained.

ELEVATOR FOR WHEAT

LACK OF THEM IN EUROPEAN CITIES.

Organization Needed to Handle Shipments at Great Centres of Population.

London, England has no elevators, and never has had, although it buys more wheat than any other city. It has six million mouths to feed, so that the grain is devoured as fast as it arrives.

To give bread to London, writes Herbert N. Carson in Harper's Weekly, would take the entire crop of Indiana or Siberia. Neither are there any elevators of any importance in Paris, Berlin or Antwerp. Whatever wheat arrives at these cities is either hurried to the mill or reshipped.

Wheat is too precious in Europe to be restored for a year or two years, as may happen in Minnesota. Rotterdam has one elevator only and of moderate size. Neither Odessa nor Sulina has any of large proportions, for the reason that in Odessa the labor unions have an unconquerable prejudice against elevators, and in Sulina the grain is held only a short time and then forwarded elsewhere.

This Sulina, as a glance at the map of Europe will show, is the loneliest of all the wheat cities. It stands on a heap of gravel at the mouth of the Danube—an oasis of human life in a vast marshy wilderness.

HAVE NEVER SEEN RAILWAY.

The children born there have never seen a railway, but 1,400 ships leave the stone docks of Sulina every year laden with enough wheat to feed London, Paris and Berlin.

To find the exact reverse of Sulina, we must go to Buenos Ayres—the premier wheat city of South America and the gayest of them all. Built up at first by the cattle trade, and now depending mainly upon wheat, this superb city has now become the topmost pinnacle of South American luxury and refinement. It has several new elevators, erected by the railway companies.

ONE POUND OF GOLD.

For every 18,000 pounds of wheat that goes to the city there will go back to the farmer one pound of gold. For every loaf of bread upon a Londoner's table there will go a cent and a half to the man behind the reaper. And so the sale of every wheat crop means that the gold will come throbbing out into the arteries of business, like the blood from the heart, and on its way back and forth nourish the whole body of the nation.

More wheat and a more efficient organization of wheat agencies—that is the programme of the future. Already one unsuccessful effort has been made to hold an international wheat congress, and the second attempt may end more happily.

FARM HANDS OF ENGLAND

THE LABORERS ARE LEAVING THE LAND.

Because Their Case Is Hopeless and Will Not Stay Till Conditions are Bettered.

According to the Manchester Guardian, the sturdy English peasant leaves the land in increased numbers, either emigrating or helping to congest the big centres of population. From this cause is disappearing more and more rapidly the backbone of the country, the sturdy farm laborer who formerly fought England's battles.

There is no reason to believe the agricultural laborer ever liked his job. For the last 150 years, whoever else has fared well, the agricultural laborer has uniformly fared ill, whoever there was on top he always was at the bottom. Once upon a time, when corn was at $1.50 a bushel, rural wages were $1.50 or $1.75 a week; so you see how little the price of corn has to do with the comforts or miseries of an agricultural laborer's lot.

LABOR NEVER REAPED.

The "country" thrived magnificently in those brave days, but the "country" was the landlord and the farmer; to some slight extent the parson. Prices were high, owners put up the rents, and farmers got their own back by cutting down the wages.

Oh, no, the agricultural laborer never liked his job, depend on it; he would have been something more or less than human if he had; but he saw no way out of it. Now the newspapers, the railways, and the emigration agencies have shown him the way—and he is taking it.

He did not like his job in the piping times of high prices, and he does not like it now. Why, if you come to think of it, should he? It is a poor sort of job in which skill brings no adequate payment.

MAKE LIFE WORTH LIVING.

If we want to keep our agricultural laborer to his job we must make a better job of it for him, and we must improve the conditions under which it is done. We must assure him a reasonable wage and hours that are not all of them hours of labor; a house, or, not to be immoderate, let us say, a cottage that keeps the water out and lets the air in, and gives some sort of chance to instincts of common decency; we must secure him against social tyranny—at least, against so much of it as that from which the town worker is secured. We must give him a chance to cultivate his own cabbages and to become, in some sort, his own master.

And this we can do only by enabling him to rent land from a public and not from a private owner. Land rented from a public authority means reasonable land at a reasonable rent, and with reasonable tenure. Land rented from a squire means none of these things, if, indeed, it can be rented at all, which, by an agricultural laborer, in ninety-nine times out of a hundred, it can't.

If you were to analyze, to sort out the passengers of any one of

POINTS IN SWINE RAISING.

Serenity, undersigned by fretful restlessness, is a characteristic of a good brood sow. Any breeder of experience will know just what is meant when it is said that a sow is "motherly," but the exact meaning is "difficult to set down in words. This maternal manifestation has an important bearing on success with a litter, and the dam's promise in this regard should have weight in her purchase. In making a selection the teats should be examined to discover that there are a dozen, well formed, not too small or obscure, and giving indications of supplying abundant milk.

The boar of eight months or over will do better if kept by himself at least, he should not be where sows or gilts may arouse him. He should be kept in a comfortable pen, with a lot or pasture adjoining, and supplied with a variety of nutritious food, which means something more than dry corn with an occasional drink of diluted dish water. The permanent quarters should be provided with a view to furnish sunlight, exercise, dry warmth and cleanliness. These should be so located that the sows may be conveniently brought to him for service. A large pen is not needed—ten feet square will do—but a yard and pasture should each be adjacent. The yard will be needed for service and for his exercise in the breeding season, and the pasture, which may be an acre, or less, should afford him water, shade, grass, alfalfa or other succulent food.

THE POOR PROFITABLE PIG.

No matter what the price offered don't let the good brood sow go. Just one blow cuts off the head of the goose that lays the egg of gold. A few more hogs could well be kept on most every farm. It isn't just fair to turn the hogs out into field where there is no place for shelter, no matter what the weather. Give them a place to creep in out of the storm, if it be nothing more than a shed with a good tight roof. Sunshine is good for hogs, but when it comes down too hot they ought to have a bit of shelter. Don't let 'em be baked alive. We all like baked pork, but there is a right time for everything. More grass and green feed now and corn by-and-by will give you healthier, better hogs.

BROOD SOWS.

In selecting gilts from any young litter for raising as breeders, the number of teats should always be ascertained. A sow can rear no more little ones than she has teats, for each keeps jealously to its own. And, singularly enough, if one of the litter dies it is very rarely, if ever, that one of the surviving youngsters takes to the spare teat. The number of teats that sows have vary from ten to sixteen, but fourteen are quite a goodly array. The numbers vary with the breeds a

ROYAL LADY ADMIRAL.

A Princess Who Controls a Steamship Line.

Several Royal ladies have had the honorary title of "Admiral" conferred upon them, and are privileged to wear a uniform denoting their rank. Princess Waldemar of Denmark is one of them, but she is the only lady in the world who could take full command of a battleship. This daughter-in-law of the Royal House of Denmark has an extraordinary passion for the sea, and can manage anything that floats, from a sailing-yawl to a Dreadnought.

Her Royal Highness has actually organized and controls one of the biggest shipping companies in Denmark. She is so proud of her accomplishment in nautical matters that she has had a large anchor tattooed on her arm, to remind her friends of her connection with the Danish navy. The anchor is plainly seen when she appears in evening dress.

Possibly her fascination for the sea is due to the fact that her husband, Prince Waldemar, is commander of the Danish navy, while her son is attending the naval academy in order to fit himself for a career afloat. She has assisted them in their studies, and in so doing has made herself conversant in the whole art of navigation, and desired to see her own country taking a more prominent part in the world's shipping industry.

Denmark is quite a small country and does not require a large fleet. So this patriotic woman made up her mind to devote her attention to building up the nation's merchant marine. Using the influence of the Royal circle she consulted great financiers, bankers, business men, and those prominent in shipping circles. These kings of industry instructed her in the methods of forming a stock company and of securing capital, besides giving her advice on the starting and maintaining of a gigantic steamship line.

As soon as the plans were completed she startled the business world a few years ago by publishing the prospectus of a company to operate a line of steamers between Scandinavia and various ports in the Far East.

The company was successfully launched, and soon became a prosperous concern. Branches have sprung up all over Europe, the headquarters being in the capital of Denmark. Every morning Her Royal Highness is present in her private office, and, with the assistance of a staff of shipping experts, controls one of the most important steamship lines in the world.

The milk of human kindness, it seems, often sours before it is distributed.

square means none of these things, if, indeed, it can be rented at all, which, by an agricultural laborer, in ninety-nine times out of a hundred, it can't.

If you were to analyze, to sort out, the passengers of any one of the emigrant ships that are leaving England just now you would find, roughly speaking, that they fell into two classes. One of those classes would consist of those who are beckoned away from us by hope; the other of those who are driven forth by despair.

The first sort—the adventurous, the enterprising sort, the sort who itch always for elbow room—we could not if we were wise, keep if we could. These are the empire builders, who "leave home without a sigh" as the old song has it.

But the men of the other class are the victims of social and economic conditions. They do not go out—they are squeezed out. These we can keep if we will. Not merely if we would rather like to, you understand, but if we will. In point of fact, we do not, so far, will. We utter laments, but our activity begins and ends with lamentation.

Adulteration of Food in France Brings in Much Money Yearly.

"Adulteration of food in France is said to result in a profit of $100,000,000 a year," remarks the Scientific American. "Bread, which may be called the national food of France, has long been adulterated largely with tale, a substance which is not only indigestible, but is exceedingly irritating to the gastro-intestinal mucous membrane because of the sharp crystal fragments which it contains. Flour is often mixed with alum or with potassium carbonate to increase the amount of water absorbed, with zinc sulphate to keep the bread fresh, with copper sulphate and ammonium carbonate to diminish the quantity of yeast required and to improve the appearance of bread made with spoiled flour.

"Denatured alcohol, costing eight the price of pure alcohol, is used for the manufacture of the liquors and aperitifs which are so largely consumed in France. Alcohol, denatured by the addition of methyl alcohol, is mixed with an equal volume of water and exposed for a few days to the sun, air and rain, which have the effect of precipitating the methyl alcohol so completely that its flavor remains barely perceptible.

"The mixture is then brought to the desired alcoholic strength by the addition of strong spirits, flavored to suit the taste of the consumer and sharpened by the addition of a pint of nitric acid to each barrel."

"And can you give my daughter all the things to which she has been accustomed?" asked her father.

"I can," replied the young man who was asking for her. "I can, but I'll be hanged if I will. You're easier than I ever'll be."

"Blessings on you, my son. You will be a son-in-law of whom any man would be proud."

TEA AND COFFEE DRUNKARDS

More Common Among Women than Men.

Moderation in tea and coffee drinking is as essential as moderation in the drinking of alcoholic liquors, if one wishes to keep body and nerves in good condition. As a matter of fact, there are medical men who assert that excessive tea and coffee drinking has the same effect upon women as is experienced by men who over-indulge in intoxicants.

Dr. Menas S. Gregory, head of the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital, New York, advises the brain worker, the sick mother, and the laboring man to be moderate in the use of tea, coffee, and intoxicants as stimulants. They play a most important part in the causing of nervous diseases, he says. Tea and coffee tipplers are more common amongst women than men. Fifteen per cent. of all who come under observation at Bellevue can trace their trouble to the free use of these stimulants.

"In 50 per cent. of the cases that come before me," says Dr. Gregory, "these stimulants are found to be the contributing cause of their mental illness. Not a few women I have examined here from time to time have admitted to drinking ten or twelve cups of tea or coffee a day. Many of them tell me they just keep the coffee-pot on the stove all day to have it handy. Such habits, of course, must eventually spell ruin to even a pretty strong constitution.

"Almost half of the 3,500 patients examined at Bellevue last year for insanity were women. The number of these mentally-deficient women have increased considerably in the past few years. Excessive tea and coffee drinking, it is certain, has a tremendous ill-effect upon women possessing a neurotic taint."

BY INTENTION.

When a Scotchman has no argument at his tongue's end to defend his own line of conduct which another may have criticised, it may safely be inferred that his ancestry has a strain from some other nation.

A man who has an estate in Scotland took his new plowman to task for the wavering furrows which were the result of his work.

"Your drills are not nearly as straight as those Angus made," he said severely. "He would not have left such a glebe as this."

"Angus didna ken his work," said Tammas, calmly, contemplating his employer with an indulgent gaze. "Ye see, when the drills is crookit the sun gets in on all sides, an' 'tis then ye get early 'taties."

THE HOPE THAT FAILED.

"But why in the world did you want to elope?"

"Well, I was in hopes that her family would never forgive us—but they did!"

ever, that one of the surviving youngsters takes to the spare teat. The number of teats that sows have vary from ten to sixteen, but fourteen are quite a goodly array. The numbers vary with the breeds a bit and most of our big, free-breeding sows are pretty well furnished with teats. This is as it should be, else many a little piggy would come on the scene with no font to run to.

A WORD FOR THE SHEEP.

Sheep for some time have been giving hogs a pretty close race, so far as profits are concerned. Farmers might all add a few to their stock and not increase their burdens very much. Not to overdo it, but just to have some while the prices are good. Lambs may be sold to advantage when they reach the seventy-five or eighty-pound limit.

Watch the springs. A thirsty sheep is sure to soon become a thin sheep; and thin sheep can't give much milk for their lambs. Take a bit of salt every time you go to the sheep pasture.

Let no man scare your flock. More can be scared out of them in five minutes than you can put on in feed in five months. Sheep that have once been chased by dogs rarely ever amount to much afterward.

THE LABOR EXCHANGES.

How They Keep the Workless in Britain.

The value of the British Labor Exchanges in bringing vacant situations to the knowledge of people seeking employment is demonstrated by the official report of the work of the Exchanges during May.

No fewer than 24,746 situations were filled, making a total during the four months that the Exchanges have been in operation of 81,627. Every month the number has increased:—February it was 12,628; in March 20,395; in April 23,858; in May 24,746.

A hundred and three Exchanges are now open, and three more are to be opened shortly. At the end of April there were on the register 81,523 names, and at the end of May the number had been reduced to 75,402 (men 58,956, boys 4,438, women 9,993, girls 1,955). The number of women slightly increased, and the decrease, as in previous months was almost entirely among men, an evidence that trade is slowly but surely improving.

The applications received during May numbered 100,32 (men 72,860, boys 7,868, women 16,171, and girls 3,493) compared with 116,523 (men 83,422, boys 11,612, women 17,463, and girls 4,088) during April. These figures do not include renewals but do include re-applications by persons whose registration had lapsed or been cancelled.

Thus, while applications decreased, the number of vacancies filled increased from 23,858 in April to 24,025 in May (men 15,857, boys 2,695, women 4,168, girls 1,275). The proportion of vacancies filled to vacancies notified rose from 75 per cent. in April to 78 per cent. in May.

Their Legacy

The heavy hands of the grandfather clock had marked the passing of an hour, and the log on the hearth had burned down to a dull red since husband or wife had spoken. The man had drawn his chair close to the fire, and, with hands loosely clasped, sat gazing long and abstractedly, now at the glowing embers, now at the paper which lay folded on his knee.

Once or twice he looked across the room to where his wife sat at the bay window. The winter afternoon was drawing to a close, and her head was bent over the sock she was darning in her efforts not to lose the last fleeting gleam of sunshine.

At length he laid down his pipe, and there was a puzzled uneasiness in his glance as it rested on her. But the small head with its neat coil of grey hair remained bent, and after a moment's hesitation he resumed his gaze into the fire.

At length, carefully smoothing out the newspaper, he said slowly: "Well, Ellen, this will of Henry's is certainly a surprise, and it's hard to believe it all at once."

He paused and then continued: "He was always a queer fellow, was my cousin Henry, making money one day, losing it the next. No one ever heard of him since he went West to try his luck again. And now to think of his dying out there a rich man and leaving his fortune to us."

"And you are certain it is—to us?" the woman asked, with her eyes fixed on the sock.

"Why, yes—at least, that's what the paper here means by 'nearest of kin.' Henry never had any brothers or sisters, and mine are all dead. Besides us there's only my nephew Tom it could go to, and it will be his some day."

There was no answer, and the needle sped quickly to and fro. The man watched it silently for some minutes, then he noticed with quick pain that the hand which held it looked thin and worn. "Ellen," he said gently "you shall have that dress now."

Then the woman looked up. She had a very sweet, gentle face, and in spite of the wrinkles it held more than one trace of past beauty and of past suffering.

"Why, what dress, Ben?" she asked.

"The one we saw in the shop window before we were married. I promised I'd buy it for you when I got rich; don't you remember it?"

There was a touch of disappointment in the question, and the woman was quick to detect it.

"Indeed, I do remember it, Ben," she said eagerly. "It was the loveliest pale blue with little daisies in it, and—"

"Green leaves," added the man. "And it was so soft, and still it sounded silky. I have never seen another dress like it—and I have never wanted one so much."

"Well, you have had to wait a long time, but you will have it now," her husband said promptly.

"Ben," she cried appealingly, "do you think if we were to go to Heaven rich my little one would know us? If our riches would change us so she would not know us. I think even there my heart would break."

A big, rough hand was laid tenderly on her own, and the man's voice was strangely husky as he said: "Ellen, I don't think we need Henry's money, after all," and, when she turned to him quickly, he added: "There's Tom."

"Yes," she whispered, "and he is young, and the money will mean far more to him than to us. I think somehow we have enough."

And when the darning was resumed a moment later the face which bent over it wore a look of joy and peace and the familiar place looked more cheerful and homelike than ever to the two that even for a short time had contemplated the many things that riches could buy.

MISSING LINK PROBLEM.

Man May Have Orang-Outang or Gorilla for Ancestor.

A man may have a gorilla, a chimpanzee, an orang-outang or a gibbon for an ancestor, according to Dr. F. Melchers, a German biologist. In an article on the descent of man, published in the Zeitgeist, Dr. Melchers presents a new theory, the essence of which is that mankind is divided into four great race groups, each of which is descended from one of four race groups of anthropoid apes.

Dr. Melchers ascribes the difficulty hitherto met in solving the missing link problem and filling the gap in the later descent of man to the attempt to trace the human races to one parent stock. This, he says, is due to the Old Testament story of a single race surviving and impressing itself on modern evolutionary theories.

Instead of searching for a single ancestral ape type it is necessary to find four, of which the above named are representatives. Basing his argument on a large number of physical peculiarities both of men and apes, Dr. Melchers classifies men and apes in the following relations:

From a gorilla type are descended the race which he calls West Congo-Guinea-Sudan - negro, the Bantus and the Zulus, the last two being mixed races, and also the fair-haired and red haired northern races, including the Finns.

From the chimpanzee descend bushmen, Lapps, Barbers, some Turanian races, Iberians and southern Europeans.

The orang-outang is the ancestor of Tasmanians, Australians, Papuans and short headed south Germans, while all the races known as Mongolians, as well as Malays, Polynesians and Siberians, descend from the gibbon.

Dr. Melchers contends that each of these groups has differentiating physical peculiarities which correspond exactly to the physical peculiarities of the ape with which he classes it.

JAPAN WILL FIGHT U.S. ENGLAND LOSING BLOOD

A BRITISH NAVAL EXPERT'S OPINION.

The Conflict is Inevitable—Japan's Growing Dislike for Americans.

Writing in the Daily Graphic, Gerald Fiennes, naval expert, considers that war between Japan and the United States is inevitable, and that no European power will take part. The British-Japanese alliance will not be renewed in 1915.

SEES WAR WITH JAPAN.

"Japan will," he asserts, "in the last analysis, fight the United States very much for the reason that prompted Bismarck to fight France."

He admits that if Japan to-day ordered Germany out of Kiao-chau, the Kaiser would have no alternative but to move out, adding, however, that in such an event the old European league would revive, and Germany, France and Russia would overwhelm the Mikado's people.

"But," contends this naval expert, "Europe is not going to life a finger, I imagine, when war breaks out between Japan and the United States, to save to the latter the islands of which they deprived Spain. Europe has a 'Monroe doctrine' of its own; and it includes the determination to leave the United States to stew in their own juice."

THE OPEN DOOR.

"The situation may be quite briefly defined, though I do not pretend that the definition exhausts all the elements. The white nations demand the open door in the realms of the yellow man, while claiming the right to close their own door to him. Japan will accept either alternative, but not both at once. For the present the United States stand for the embodiment of the white man's position."

"Great Britain, bound by the ties of an alliance for the next few years and remote from the dangers which bulk so big in the eyes of Americans, Canadians and Australians, is out of sympathy with, or is at least lukewarm over, the policy of exclusion which her own children in the Pacific consider vital to their national safety and economical development."

"Therefore there exists a certain community of ideas between the over sea nations of the Empire and the United States, which may easily become perilous to the unity of the Empire. In our enthusiasm for common defence we must never forget that common defence postulates common aims and common policy."

"The Japanese alliance expires in 1915; it cannot be renewed. If renewal was possible before, it became impossible when the American fleet visited Australia in 1908 and suggested to the people of the commonwealth that Codlin is their friend, not Short. If no conflict arise between now and then to make the name of the Pacific ocean an irony the British navy, reinforced by, let us hope, a good number of 'fleet units,' contributed not only by Australia and New Zealand, but also by Canada, South Africa and

HER BEST PEOPLE LEAVING THE OLD LAND.

The National Stamina Wanes, and Population is Crowding Into Cities.

On the face of it, says the Manchester Guardian, it may not be well when a nation sends thousands of its sons across the sea. It depends entirely on the sort of sons it sends.

Emigration is rather like blood-letting. The letting of bad blood and of unwholesome humors oftentimes relieves the patient, and even restores him to health; the letting of good blood, on the other hand, leads always to weakness, and, if prolonged, to death itself.

There are quite a lot of people who could be spared from England—our idlers, to wit, our wastrels, our detrimentals, moral and physical.

In the last census, more than six hundred thousand adults wrote themselves down as of "no occupation."

But these are not the people whom the emigrant ships bear off towards the setting sun. On the whole, our country is a pleasant sort of place for parasites, and, anyhow, the parasite is a clinging animal; the wastrel is an unenterprising one.

FIGHTERS AND WORKERS.

Those of our fellow-countrymen whom we are losing just now are, if not the best, at least of the best, that we have among us; those, at any rate, who can least happily be spared. England wants workers; England may want fighters, and England is parting with both . . . in many thousands.

If the phenomenon be a phenomenon of evil some slight comfort may be derived from the reflection that it is not a new phenomenon. It is constant and ever recurring. For a good many centuries there has been an outflow, a human outflow, from these islands. The very fact of the existence of the United States of America, with their eighty millions or so population talking English, speaks loudly of the emigration of the past.

EMIGRATION MADE EMPIRE.

Emigration, moreover, is the reason why so large a portion of the world's map is painted red. So many of our kin go to Canada now because so many of our kin went to Canada in days gone by. Had it not been for emigration there would be no Canada for our kin to go to; there would be only a waste land, or a strange, foreign land speaking a strange, foreign tongue.

A writer in a contemporary, much alarmed by the continued emigration, makes the statement that our population no longer increases. The census figures disprove this. In twenty years our population increased between six and seven million. The next census will no doubt show a further increase of three and a half millions in the past decade.

sounded silky. I have never seen another dress like it—and I have never wanted one so much."

"Well, you have had to wait a long time, but you will have it now," her husband said promptly; but she answered with a smile that was half regretful, half amused.

"Why, Ben, I was only a foolish young girl then. That blue silk must be old and worn out now, and faded, too, like my eyes. You said it matched them then."

"They're just the same now," the man persisted, but she retorted with a bright little laugh.

"Ben, dear, are you trying to make fun of me? A pretty sight I'd be in a pale dress now, an old woman with grey hair and wrinkles. No, no, this is good enough," and a rough, little hand stroked the black merino softly.

"It will be very nice of you, Ben," she said presently. "I've been thinking of all you can do now we're rich. There's that little plot adjoining our property to even off our garden; you've been wanting for many years, and you can get another horse to take the place of Jack, as you were saying early yesterday how slow he had become."

"Um, yes, poor fellow! But I think he'd feel queer and I'd feel queer if I were to drive any other horse now. And as to that bit of garden, we couldn't take our neighbor's ground just because we are rich, could we?"

"No," the woman said quietly, but she looked across at the figure beside the fire with a very loving smile.

The man was looking at the tired little hands plying the needle, when he said:

"Ellen, you will not have to darn or mend any more now." The woman shook her head.

"That wouldn't do for me," she said. "I have grown so used to work that I couldn't stop now."

"Well, let us see what we are to do with our money," said the man cheerily. "I suppose you will have to work a little if you want to, but you said this morning that the furniture and dishes were worn out and shabby."

The woman looked at the table which was laid for the evening meal, and here her eyes rested on the Delf set which had been a wedding-gift. It was battered, with edges out of the cups and plates, and the handle of the teapot held in place by tightly wound wire. It brought to her mind the sorrow of their life, the death of their only child, whose baby fingers broke the handle.

"I don't think I could give up the old set," she said unsteadily. "We could keep it to look at sometimes, even if we had new ones, couldn't we, dear?"

The man did not answer. He was looking at the mended teapot, and the woman wondered if a child's frightened cry had come echoing to him across the years as it had to her.

"Ben," she said hesitatingly, "when you used to read to me of countries and places far away you used to say, 'When we are rich we will see that for ourselves.'"

"We can go now if—if you like," answered the other.

Then suddenly there was silence. The half-darned sock fell unheeded to the floor.

GREEN IS UNLUCKY.

This is the Pronouncement of a Well-known Prophetess.

Green is an unlucky color, according to the latest pronouncement of Mme. de Thebes, the well-known "prophetess," says a London Daily Mail despatch from Paris. "I say, let English women, when they go back to color, beware of green," the seer said, in her quaintly furnished apartments, hung with hundreds of plaster casts of the hands of noted personages, and with mascots and talismans.

"My reasoning is quite simple," she proceeded. "Happiness and success in life depend on the quantity of the rays one emits. Happiness depends on light and brightness. That is why the ancients chose white as their mourning color. Women ought to wear as much white as possible."

"When the world was shaped the trees were given their green to shade men from the sun, so green stands for darkness and is ill-starred. I have gone deeply into all this absorbingly-interesting question of the influence of colors, precious stones, and flowers on human destinies. One of my latest successes is to destroy the influence of the pig as a luck-bringer. Not an unclean pig, but the sacred elephant is the real mascot, and I am selling to my clients numbers of elephant charms in virgin-white onyx and solid silver. And look at my rooms!" Indeed, there were elephants in wood, china and silver everywhere.

LITTLE FADS OF AUTHORS.

Habits Which Writers Thought Conduced to Best Work.

Mark Twain's habit of writing in bed in the latter years of his life has called attention to some of the peculiarities of composition among earlier authors.

Milton never could write his poems unless his head was thrown as far back as possible and his eyes looked upward. Maturin stuck a wafer between his eyebrows when he was working, not only to show his servants and household that he was engaged in composition, but also to help him to concentrate his faculties.

Glover was best able to compose a ballad while he was walking in the garden of a friend, and destroying her flower beds with his cane. Although Mezeray worked only in the daytime, he had to have candlelight in the room while he wrote his histories. Rousseau found that his thoughts came most freely when he wandered in the woods and collected botanical specimens.

Descartes lay perfectly still and motionless while engaged in thought. Ampere could work on his problems only while standing up, and thus he anticipated the desk of those modern writers who stand at their work. Ampere was in the habit of writing down his thoughts in enormous letters.

Haydn never set to work on his scores without drawing on the ring given to him by Frederick II. and Paesielo was in the habit of covering himself with bedclothes before he thought he was really capable of his best work.

the name of the Pacific ocean an irony the British navy, reinforced by, let us hope, a good number of 'fleet units,' contributed not only by Australia and New Zealand, but also by Canada, South Africa and India, will once more earn for itself the blessing bestowed on the peacemakers. The Pacific fleet will live up to its name. It will be expensive, but it will be well worth while.

CAUSE FOR WAR.

"The Americans live in a fool's paradise in this matter."

"They appear to think that the Japanese are, and must eternally be, grateful to Commodore Perry for having opened their oyster, willy nilly. The Japanese are only grateful in so far as contact with the west has armed their hands against western greed and aggression. Their main desire is to use the power thus acquired to cry 'Hands off!' to the white man."

"The insistence by the Americans on their right to trade on equal terms with the Japanese in Manchuria and Corea; the treatment of the subjects of the latter Power on the Pacific slope—either of these causes of disappointment will provide Japan with a 'casus belli' at the desired moment, and one which will, in all probability, put her in the right in the eyes of the world. The Japanese know how to apply the art of jiu-jitsu to international politics."

JAPAN DESPISES AMERICANS.

"More dangerous still, the Japanese are full of contempt for American brag and bounce—for lack of national spirit, or even of true nationality, which they discern in the Americans. They have a profound disbelief in the war worthiness of the American navy, and an acute realization of the fact that the strategical situation is overwhelmingly in their favor. It is objected that the Japanese are too poor to fight. When will people recognize the fact which all history teaches—that it is the poor nations, not those who have grown rich and comfortable, which fight? The Prussia of Frederick the Great, the France of Napoleon, were poor."

"It ought to be so obvious as not to need saying that it is the nation which hopes to gain something, not the nation which is preoccupied in holding what it has gained, which is tempted to war. Japan is rich enough to afford war because, directly or indirectly, she will make war pay for itself."

PROFIT INSURANCE.

Profit insurance is a comparatively new thing in England. It has only existed for three or four years, and in that time has become extraordinarily successful. As the name indicates, it insures the loss of profits after a business has been stopped by fire or some kind of disaster. It is operated in this manner. The books of the firm applying for the policy are gone over by an accountant, and their average profits for two preceding years ascertained. The firm is then allowed to take out an insurance based on this average profit for three months, six months, or a year. If a fire, an earthquake, a tornado, or any catastrophe destroys their business the insurance company pays them for the time they have been insured the profits agreed upon.

ceased between six and seven million. The next census will no doubt show a further increase of three and a half millions in the past decade.

PLENTY OF A KIND.

So that we can spare a few hundred thousand emigrants, and still be strong in numbers. England is not, as the writer above referred states, "being turned into a desert."

What, in point of fact we are turning England into is a number of densely-packed industrial centres. In the last eight years London has increased its population by 300,000, Manchester by 100,000, Sheffield by 90,000, and so on through the list of all our great cities and towns—the cities and towns in which men work, in which they make things.

These people are fed to a great and to an ever-increasing extent by the labor of men who have emigrated in days gone by, and their children will be fed by the labor of men who are emigrating to-day. Speaking broadly, to export a laborer is sooner or later to import food, especially if that laborer happens to be landed at a Canadian port.

STRONG NAVY.

So long as we continue to worry about our navy we need not to worry about our food supply. Canadian producers will put it fast enough and in sufficient quantity upon the corn ships, if only our cruisers and battleships see to it that it gets here.

No, it is not the supply of agricultural produce that needs greatly to trouble our thoughts. It is the supply of agricultural men. If history teaches one great lesson more surely than another, it is that no civilization can be based, or can for long be sustained upon aught but agriculture, and the reason is that only the men bred in agricultural districts and trained by agricultural pursuits can hold a civilization against its foes from without.

YEOMEN THE REAL THING.

We should do well to remind ourselves from time to time that it was a few thousand agriculturists, not a few thousand factory hands, or bankers' clerks, or even professional footballers, who for three years or thereabouts kept a British army at bay in South Africa.

England is losing her agriculture, and she is losing it from many and multifarious causes, the first and most important of which is that the agricultural laborer has learned to dislike his job and learned how to escape from it—to Canada and other places.

WHERE WE GET ASBESTOS.

More than four-fifths of the world's supply of asbestos comes from the Province of Quebec, in what is known as the serpentine belt, running through the townships of Thetford, Coleraine, Robertson and Broughton, about 100 miles from Montreal. While the history of the industry dates back to 1877, it has only expanded to its present proportions during the last few years. The province has already produced over $25,000,000 worth of asbestos, and is now averaging $2,000,000 worth a year.

MOSCOW'S SNOW WHITE WALLS,

above which rises an efflorescence of bulbous cupolas, spires, pinnacles and pyramids colored bright blue or green or gilt with gold, astounds the traveller who associates age with grayness and decay.

At the same time one cannot but feel attracted by the striking individuality of this city, which, scorning the conventions of modern Europe, glitters proudly in barbaric splendor. Within the Kremlin the Czars receive their crown "from God and the Fatherland," and here they come subsequently to speak and act in all the most decisive moments of their reigns.
Hence it has caused some wonder that Nicholas II. did not go to Moscow to proclaim war with Japan.

The Russian court is said to be the richest in Europe, the minimum revenue of the Czar being estimated at $7,500,000. Besides the Grand Palace in the Kremlin, with its magnificent throne room, the Czar has twelve residences in or near St. Petersburg, including the Winter Palace, where six thousand people can be entertained, one of the most spacious and striking homes of European royalty, and the Hermitage, which contains one of the best art collections in the world.

AT PETERHOF

there is a group of royal residences and parks, with gardens rivaling those at Versailles, and at Tsarskoe-Selo, about twelve miles from St.
Petersburg, there are several palaces, on one of which Catherine the Great lavished wealth, decorating the facade with figures gilded with gold leaf, a method of ornamentation which cost her subjects more than three million ducats.

The interiors of the palaces are still more magnificent; walls are encrusted with rare lapis lazuli; ebony floors are inlaid with floral designs in mother of pearl, ceilings are lined with amber, one room in the Kremlin shines with the purest gold, and everywhere precious marbles and exquisite mosaics are

FUNNY OLD SIGN BOARDS

USED IN ENGLAND IN THE OLDEN DAYS.

Merchants Kept Variety of Goods
That Would Drive Men of
To-day Crazy.

English sign boards dating back many years ago are curiosities in the matter of spelling and in the form of advertising used then.

A study of some of them makes people of to-day wonder how one man or one small firm could carry such a general stock or do so many things as the sign boards indicated.

The signs are noteworthy also as showing how some advertisers managed to put their own names off and prominently before "the people."

Following are copies of several old signboards in England:

SYMPATHY AS A CURE.

Marvellous Cures by Stone Gods in Japan.

Every one knows the comfort little people derive from a kiss on the bruised spot, a loving pat, soft and soothing, on the bumped head.
Even folk of greater growth are not proof against such sympathetic alleviations of their pain of body or mind. A tender little bit of human nature is that told by Gilbert Watson in "Three Rolling Stones in Japan." The author visited a temple where one of the big stone gods was supposed to heal all bodily hurts.

"How does he work his cures?"
asked I.

"By personal contact. Rub the place you wish healed with the same hand you have rubbed him. If we wait we will be sure to see some one cured."

CANNOT PAY FINES.

Case of People Sent to Prison for Their Poverty.

The frequent committals to prison of persons who are unable to pay forthwith fines imposed upon them—often for minor offences—have been brought by the Howard Association to the notice of the British Home Secretary. The association has for many years contended that to send people to prison because of their poverty is disastrous alike to the individual and the State.

The late Home Secretary sent out a recommendation that time should be allowed for payment when the offenders had settled homes and occupations. The recommendation has, however, proved ineffectual, and the association asked the Home Secretary to receive a deputation on the subject.

Mr. Churchill at once granted an interview, at which the deputation suggested that nothing less than a law giving to offenders who had settled abodes a few weeks' grace before they were committed to prison would be effectual. Mr. Churchill had with him Mr. Masterman, Under-Secretary; Sir Evelyn Ruggles-Brise, K.C.B., Chairman of the Prison Commission, and Sir Edward Troupe, head of the Statistical Department.

The whole of these gentlemen heartily approved of the suggested reform, Sir E. Ruggles-Brise greatly strengthening the case by producing a list of men now undergoing imprisonment in a London prison who possessed settled abodes, and who declared that they could have paid their fines had a little time been allowed them. It was also stated that a Governor of a London prison recently said that at least one-fourth of those daily under his charge ought not to be in prison at all.

Mr. Churchill said the system was intolerable, and that he would give instant attention to the matter, for it was evident that the sons of poor people were sent to prison for small offences that would be condoned in the sons of wealthier people. He was grateful to the Howard Association for bringing this matter before him.

THE WAR AGAINST HAIL.

Notwithstanding scientific demonstrations of its futility, the practice of bombarding thunder-clouds with "hail cannon" continues in many of the vine-growing regions of France and northern Italy. The theory underlying this practice is that the discharges disrupt the clouds and prevent the formation of hail. Much money has been spent on the needful apparatus and many vine-growers have an enthusiastic confidence in it. A new effort to convince the advocates of the system that they are wasting their time and money has just been reported to the Paris Academy of Sciences. It is based upon a comparison of records of losses in the Department of the Rhone for 20 years before and for 10 years since the cannon were introduced, and it shows that the losses have slightly increased instead of diminishing since the war on hail was begun.

still more magnificent walls, already encrusted with rare lapis lazuli; ebony floors are inlaid with floral designs in mother of pearl; ceilings are lined with amber, one room in the Kremlin shines with the purest gold, and everywhere precious marbles and exquisite mosaics are to be seen.

The splendor of the Russian jewels exceeds all powers of description; we know that Catherine the Great's coronation robe was too heavily laden with gems that it took twelve chamberlains to support it. The Czar's throne, which belonged to the last Emperor of Constantinople, is of finest ivory studded with precious stones, and that of the Czarina contains 1,223 rubies and 876 diamonds, besides pearls and turquoises.

SPLENDID FETES

are given in the Winter Palace during the season, and one is almost weary of traversing the many gorgeous halls which lead to the state ballroom, where the towering white marble pillars are mirrored by the polished floor, where a soft light is diffused by lamps concealed by tropical plants and ferns rising in banks against the walls and where mingling with the strains of the orchestra, one hears the warbling of birds hanging in gold cages under tall palm trees.

The present sovereigns have simple tastes, however. Even in the great Winter Palace the private rooms belonging to the Czar and Czarina are simply decorated and furnished in the English style, the hangings being of pretty cretonne and the furniture of light oak.

It is interesting to know that of all the thousands of her wedding gifts the Czarina brought only three to Peterhof, and that two of these were presented by the Japanese, soon to be at war with Russia. One is an enormous sea eagle, larger than life, in beautiful carved ivory. The other gift is of equal artistic value, being a threefold screen representing a foam flecked, stormy sea, wonderfully worked in gray and greenish white silks.

PRINCE HENRY HUMORIST.

Third Son of King George Apt at Repartee.

Prince Henry, the third son of the King and Queen, is the humorist of the family, and many stories are told around the court respecting his brisk humor and apt retorts. At a recent picnic his sister, the Princess Mary, was allowed to bake some cakes for tea, and the boys were asked their opinions about them. Prince Henry looked at his cake with a whimsical smile and then said:

"It is high treason, is it not, to speak disrespectfully of the daughter of the Prince of Wales?"

Upon another occasion his elder brothers were discussing their future careers. Prince Edward was explaining that he was to be a soldier in due course, while Prince Albert declared that he meant to stick to the navy.

"What are you going to be, Henry?" he asked. "Oh!" he rapped out. "I will just stay at home and tell the people all the great things that both of you are doing in case they overlook them."

A WOMAN PIRATE.

Captured in Indo-China and Brought to France.

In the steamer Admiral Ponty there arrived at Marseilles recently with a party of Annamite pirates and malefactors a remarkable woman, one of the wives of the redoubtable pirate De Tham, who has given the French so much trouble in Indo-China.

Co-Ba, as the woman pirate is called, exercised a dominating influence over the pirate king and his followers, a power she even preserved throughout the voyage, which the prisoners made in a specially constructed iron cage built amidships. The other prisoners on receiving their rations immediately handed them to Co-Ba for distribution and she laid down iron regulations for the prisoners' life on board. Her word was always scrupulously respected.

Co-Ba, a small hard-faced woman of about thirty, enjoyed the reputation of a witch among the pirates, and she ferociously hated the white men. When the prisoners landed it was she who marched proudly at their head, taking not the slightest notice of the crowds who watched the debarkation of the prisoners on their way to the Ile de Re, in the Bay of Biscay.

was supposed to heal all bodily hurts.

"How does he work his cures?" asked I.

"By personal contact. Rub the place you wish healed with the same hand you have rubbed him. If we wait we will be sure to see some one try it."

No one came for a long time, save one old woman, who laid a little bunch of flowers between the feet of the image, in gratitude, doubtless, for restoration from disease. By and by a shrill childish cry made us turn. A little girl had fallen and hurt herself; the little knee had bruised itself against the sharp corner of an uneven flagstone. Tears welled up in her eyes and trickled down her cheeks as the small one held up her knee for the old woman's inspection. The rose-leaf skin was broken where the pavement had scratched it.

The old woman bent over the little sufferer and whispered consolation. The look of pain passed, and confidence took its place. Hand in hand, the two crossed over to the figure of the god. The woman clasped her hands, uttered a prayer, stroked the god's knee with her withered hand, and then rubbed the little human knee very tenderly.

The cure was effected at once; the child smiled up at the ugly deity gratefully, with naive affection in her eyes. The impassive stone statue seemed beautiful to her now. The dear old god had kissed her knee and made it well, so of course she loved him, and would think of him often, sitting there in the temple, waiting to heal little children who had hurt themselves.

COMFORT IN THE JUNGLE.

Everything From Soup to Nuts on Big Game Trip.

When the Duke of Connaught went hunting big game in East Africa, no unnecessary hardship was permitted to mar the pleasure of the outing. Unusually comfortable tents were taken along—spacious and lofty—with a good bed, furniture and a bath. Even the dishes were not metal, as usual, but enameled and glass. Supplies for the hunter were carried on the backs of sixteen pack mules and fifty donkeys. Twenty-five sheep were taken to supply meat for the party, and deer, wild duck and other game afforded variety. Five cows accompanying the caravan supplied fresh milk daily.

Here is a sample menu:

Soup—Buffalo tail.
Fish—Fried barbel.
Entree—Mutton cutlets.
Joint—Roast guinea fowl.
Sweet—Stewed apples.
Cheese. Coffee.

ELECTRICITY IN MILLS.

In the development of electricity as a motive power for cotton-mills in England, the plan has generally been adopted of using a separate motor in every room. In a German mill this system has been pushed even farther, each machine having its own motor, so that no shafting is employed. In Lancashire and Yorkshire many cotton and other mills have recently adopted electrical driving exclusively. It is claimed that there is a considerable increase in the output of the mills.

A SYSTEM'S EXPERT AT YOUR DISPOSAL.

Mr. A. J. Masey, of Kingston, will give advice to any merchant wishing to place his store system on a better basis.

The enterprising merchant knows that besides having the right goods, and selling them at the right prices, he must have the right system for looking after his accounts and taking care of his cash. Mr. A. J. Masey, Box 67, Kingston, is a systems expert of long standing, and is acquainted with the methods in vogue amongst the great merchant princes of this continent. Mr. Masey represents the National Cash Register Company and although he is interested in the sale of National Cash Registers, his advice and help are always placed at the disposal of any merchant desiring it, free of charge, whether a register is purchased or not. Drop a line to Mr. Masey and he will be glad to visit you the next time he is in your territory.

A Long Walk.

After walking along the Atlantic coast from Maine to Labrador, and through the wilds of Newfoundland, Frank Heins, a young native of the Maritime provinces arrived in Napanee on Friday evening enroute on foot to the Pacific coast and return. He called on Mayor Simpson and had a chat with that gentleman, explaining the route he had covered and some of his experiences. Heins started on his three year's walk over a year ago. He walked through New Brunswick and Nova Scotia and then got over into Quebec and thence on to Labrador. He crossed over to Newfoundland and then returned and started on his trip across the continent. Heins has undertaken the long walk to win a wager. He was allowed to take no money with him nor is he allowed to ask for money, meals or lodgings. He has to depend entirely upon voluntary contributions for his existence. Like the Ancient Mariner he tells his tale, which invariably results in the interested hearer giving a contribution. Heins has to call on some dignitary in each town through which he passes and get a certificate. He has also to get a certificate of health from physicians frequently. Since starting out Heins has worn 22 pairs of boots and he expects to use two or three times that many before he completes his long journey. He stopped in town until Saturday afternoon and then took the G. T. R. tracks leading on to the west. He has to complete his journey to British Columbia and be back at the Atlantic coast before Oct. 23rd, 1911. Before he left town on Saturday he called upon Dr. R. A. Leonard and was given a certificate of health.

A SERIOUS DINER.

The Way the Great Emperor Charles V. Ate His Meals.

The diary of a German gentleman, Bartholomew Sawstrow, who lived in the time of the Emperor Charles V., gives us a good idea of the gastronomic customs of those times. Sawstrow's description of the table habits of the greatest ruler in his day is very interesting.

Young princes and counts served the repast. There were invariably four courses of six dishes. The emperor had no one to carve for him. He began by cutting his bread in pieces large enough for one mouthful, then attacked his plate. He often used his fingers while he held the plate under his chin with the other hand.

When he felt thirsty he made a sign to the "doctor" standing by the table; then they went to the sideboard for two silver flagons and filled a goblet which held about a measure and a half. The emperor drained it to the last drop, practically at one draft.

During the meal he never uttered a syllable, scarcely smiled at the most amusing sallies of the jesters behind his chair, finally picked his teeth with quills and, after washing his hands, retired to a window recess, where anybody could approach him with a petition.

A term of imprisonment will certainly follow conviction.

Henry Skinner, Watertown, N. Y., is at S. Winter's; Frederick Eagle, wife and son, Eric, at L. Babcock's; Mrs. M. Tobin, Kingston, at P. Manion's; C. Kennedy, Newburgh, at S. Winter's; Lily Hartman and Ethel, at Manson Lee's; Mabel Trumpour and Lillian Haggerty, Tamworth, at A. Lee's.

Something should be done to relieve the situation at Harrowsmith. It does seem strange to see a train pull up at a siding and passengers, who are willing to pay the price, not allowed to enter the cars. Many are unable to take the 7 a. m. train on the K. & P., who have always come in on the B. of Q. train. Quite a number of excursions run over the B. of Q. to Kingston and a number from Harrowsmith take in these excursions, but it looks now as though they will have to stay at home. Through the agitation of a question the end is sometimes accomplished and this trouble should not lay still. The board of trade and Kingston publications should take this matter up and have it rescinded in some way for it is to Kingston's interest to do so.

To keep Ants away.

We have found the article to do it at last. "Sangran Oil" not poisonous and not disagreeable to smell, can be used with perfect safety around pantry shelves etc, get 20c worth at Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store.

RUPTURE

J. V. EGAN, Specialist of Toronto

A WORD OF CAUTION.

Procrastination is the most common error of ruptured people. In most cases they do not realize the risk they are running. You may have been ruptured for some time and not noticed any change for better or worse. But, remember, no rupture stands still. Even if not getting larger the bowel is growing fast to the inside, and any day your ordinary truss is liable to slip while lifting or coughing and let more of the bowel escape. In such a case strangulated hernia may result in death. Many people come to me constipated, nervous, irritable, suffering from indigestion and constant colds. They seldom charge this to their rupture, but that is where their ill-health originates. A rupture strains the whole physical organism and is a constant nerve irritant, a breeding place for the germs of typhoid, and frequently causes rheumatism, paralysis and sterility. Your rupture cured will make you feel like a new being; your nerves will recover their normal tone and your rundown condition replaced by vigorous, joyous health. Act at once and remove the daily danger of death which, like a threatening thundercloud, hangs over the head of every ruptured person. Don't delay, to suffer and die. Let me help you live and enjoy life. What I have done for thousands in the past fifty years I can do for you today. Awaken to the fact what a cure means to you—viz., immediate security, comfort and a perfect physical condition. This is all yours today for the asking. Out-of-town patients can consult me and return home same day relieved of all rupture trouble permanently. No operation, pain or loss of time. Tear off free coupon now.

Free Consultation Coupon.
